LAW HALTS WORK ON SPRING CREEK BRIDGE

Commissioners Advised Plans Must Go Before Two Grand Juries.

OFF UNTIL SEPTEMBER

New Bridge Proposed as Only Remedy
After Repairs to Old Structure Were Stopped by Protest of Citizens—Leads to More Trouble.

Just when the Bellefonte borough Council, at its meeting on Monday night, believed that it had solved the troubles arising from the project to remodel the bridge over Spring Creek nearby the Bush House, County Solicitor Clement Dale walked into the room and announced that so far as the County Commissioners were concerned everything would have to be declared off until September, at the earliest. Had Mr. Dale dropped a bomb into Council chamber he could not have created more of a sensation.

When the County Commissioners originally signed the joint contract with Bellefonte borough it called for repairs to the bridge, to cost $4500. Of this the County was to pay two-thirds and the borough one-third. As told in "The Republican" last week, when work was started on the repairs to the bridge, nearby property owners protested against the style of under-truss construction, fearing it would aggravate conditions in time of flood.

Because there was no other course left open, the borough Council reluctantly took up the plan of constructing an entirely new bridge. This was to cost $8700, of which the County was expected to pay two-thirds and the borough one-third. The net cost to the borough, it was set forth, would be not more than $2500. The old bridge structure was to be turned over to the County, the thought being that it could be utilized at some other points where new bridges are needed and where the traffic would not require such a heavy type of construction as is needed in Bellefonte.

When the County Commissioners entered into the contract for the repairs to the bridge they believed that they were acting entirely within the provisions of the bridge laws of the State, which are numerous and exhaustive. When the idea of repairing the old bridge was necessarily abandoned and the plan of constructing a new bridge was taken up, the County Commissioners called in their solicitor, Mr. Dale, and then there developed a new hitch and one which caused the borough Council to declare everything off for the present.

Mr. Dale pointed out to the County Commissioners that the law prohibited their participating in a contract for a new bridge until after the matter had first been recommended by two Grand Juries and formally approved by the Court. This form of procedure not having been complied with up to the present time, Mr. Dale advised the County Commissioners that they could not legally contract with Bellefonte borough for the proposed new bridge, and that the only thing left for them to do was to notify the borough Council. Regretting that work on the bridge would have to be abandoned, but insisting that the law be complied with to the letter, the County Commissioners directed Mr. Dale to appear before Council and announce their decision.

Council had listened to a petition of citizens urging that a new bridge be constructed and a resolution directing the Street Committee to go ahead along that line was about to be voted on when Mr. Dale, who had been occupying a seat in the room, asked to be heard. He briefly explained matters, saying that while it was unpleasant news the situation was one that should be thoroughly understood before Council might take any further action on the resolution. Mr. Dale said:

"It is a very grave question whether the Commissioners had a legal right to sign the contract for the proposed repairs to the bridge and whether they could not be surcharged for the $2000 in that matter. That is a matter on which opinion may differ. The law gives them the right to contract for repairs to a bridge where such repairs are deemed an actual necessity, and I suppose that would apply to this case. The Commissioners, however, cannot legally contract for a new bridge until after it has been before two Grand Juries and approved by the Court. Where a bridge is swept away by flood or destroyed by fire the Commissioners may proceed at once to the construction of a new bridge, but in such cases only. I did not know until last week that the Commissioners had signed the contract for repairs to the present bridge. Had I known of it beforehand, I should have advised against their signing the contract. It would have been better had

PLANS UNDER WAY FOR PAVING SOUTH HIGH ST.

Property Owners Pledged to Pay
Two-Thirds of Expense

FIFTY FEET IN BRICK

Section of Street Lies Between Spring
Creek and Dunlap Street in Front of Bush House—To Widen Sidewalks to Street Paving.

A movement is under way for the paving with brick of that section of High Street, between the Spring Creek bridge and Dunlap Street, which adjoins the Adams Express Company office on the one side of the Street, and "The Republican" office on the other side. The distance which it is proposed to have covers about one block.

Agitation for such an improvement, long recognized as badly needed, culminated in the filing with the borough Council, on Monday night, last, of a petition signed by a majority of the property owners on both sides of the section of street to be paved. Those to sign the petition, pledging themselves to pay two-thirds of the cost of paving, were Mrs. Louisa T. Bush and P. Gray Meek. The property represented by Mrs. Bush includes the Bush House, on the north side of the Street, and the McClain block, on the South side. The property represented by Mr. Meek is the office building of the "Democratic Watchman." The only property abutting on either side of the street, and not represented in the petition, is that occupied as the office of "The Republican." This property is owned by the Olewine and Smith estates.

The petition proposes that the street, for the distance described, be paved with brick to a width of fifty feet, and that the sidewalks on either side of the street be extended to the proposed paving. The section of street varies in width, being about fifty feet nearby the Spring Creek bridge, and possibly five feet wider at the bridge covering the old mill race. It is proposed widening the sidewalk in front of the Bush House about two feet in order to advance it to the paving line. It may be necessary to widen parts of sidewalks on the opposite side of the street to make it uniform and in line with the street section to be paved.

Council took no action on the matter, although it is the prevailing belief that the improvement should be made as quickly as possible. That section of High Street is anything but an advertisement for Bellefonte, especially in bad weather. It is not only a part of town to first greet the eye of the visitor, but is probably the most frequently used thoroughfare.

Before Council adjourned Robert Roan, who resides on East Beaver Street, appeared and filed complaint regarding the condition of that street. He declared that the condition of not only the street but of some sidewalks was such as to demand immediate attention. The Street Committee was directed to investigate his complaint and empowered to remedy matters. Mr. Meyer, the new engineer, reported that new planing was needed for the bridge crossing the small stream nearby the fair grounds.

Council directed that three notes, be issued to renew notes for $3000 about to expire and to meet current expenses.

Pleased With Hospital.

Members of the Appropriations Committee of the Pennsylvania Legislature last Friday visited the Bellefonte hospital and after a tour of inspection expressed themselves as highly pleased with the general condition of the institution. Before visiting Bellefonte the several members of the committee spent a day and night at State College, where they were afforded an opportunity to see what is being done there and also form some idea of the wonderful growth of the college. President Sparks, General Beaver, Harry Keller, Colonel W. Fred Reynolds and others had charge of the visitors during their stay at State College and later escorted them to Bellefonte. Here they were met by a large number of representative citizens, and after a visit to the hospital were entertained at dinner at the Country Club.

Hospital Notes.

Operations—Emanuel Korman, Pleasant View; Ethel Tate, Bellefonte; George Lannon, Unionville.
Admitted for treatment—Susan Saul, Penna. Furnace.
Discharged—Mrs. Sarah Shilling, Bellefonte.
Twenty-four patients in the hospital.

Events Recalled By Quaint Old Papers

Remarkably interesting, both for what it contains and also for the splendid state of preservation in which we find it, is an old newspaper handed us a day or two ago by a valued friend of "The Republican." To glance at its yellow pages one would naturally suppose that it was published some years ago, but upon closer inspection one is no little surprised to discover that the newspaper was published more than 110 years ago, or to be exact, on January 4, 1800. It is a copy of the "Ulster County Gazette," published in Kingston, New York, and teems with the news of the day.

Chief and foremost in interest among the news items published in the issue in question is an account of the funeral of President George Washington. The article is published under a George Town date line, under date of December 20. As a tribute to the memory of the illustrious Washington, the little four-page newspaper appeared with heavy black column rules as a badge of mourning. At either side of the pages the black rules are a full quarter of an inch in width, while those separating the several columns are possibly three eighths of an inch wide. Quarter inch rules are also used at the top and bottom of each page.

In the newspapers of that period the letter "f" was often used for our present day "s." We publish the article in the age-colored newspaper describing the funeral of Washington, the spelling being reproduced exactly as it appeared in the original. The article follows:

WASHINGTON ENTOMBED. GEORGE TOWN, DEC. 20

On Wednesday last, the mortal part of WASHINGTON the Great—the Father of his Country and Friend of man, was conveyed to the tomb, with solemn honors and funeral pomp.

A multitude of persons assembled, from many miles around, at Mount Vernon, the choice abode and last residence of the illustrious chief. There were the graves—the spacious avenues, the beautiful and sublime scenes, the noble mansion—but, also! the august inhabitant was now no more. That great soul was gone. His mortal part was there indeed; but, ah! how affecting! how awful the spectacle of such worth and greatness, thus, to the mortal eyes, fallen!—Yes, fallen! fallen!

In the long and lofty Portico, where oft the Hero walked in all his glory, now lay the shrouded corpse. The countenance still composed and serene, seemed to depress the dignity of the spirit, which had dwelt in that lifeless form. Those who paid the last sad honors to the benefactor of his country, took an impressive farewell view.

On the ornament at the head of the coffin, was inscribed SURGE AD JUDICIUM—about the middle of the coffin, GLORIA DEO—and on the silver plate, GENERAL.

GEORGE WASHINGTON

Departed this life on the 14th December, 1790, Aet. 68.

Between three and four o'clock, the sound of artillery from a vessel in the river, firing minute guns, awoke afresh our solemn sorrow—the corpse was removed—a band of music with mournful melody melted the soul into all the tenderness of woe.

Doings of the Legislature.

The House at Harrisburg, on Tuesday passed finally the school code, the vote being 131 to 63. The measure now goes to the Senate. Representative J. C. Meyer, of Bellefonte, voted against the code. The House also passed finally the Dershem soldiers pension bill. The bill now goes to the Senate. It carries an appropriation of $1,900,000 and provides monthly pensions for Civil war veterans. It was announced that the bill making changes in the primary election law, one of which fixes the last Saturday in September as the date for holding primaries in all but presidential years, would be passed finally and sent to the Governor for his signature not later than tomorrow (Friday).

Representative Jones, of Susquehanna County, this week introduced a bill appropriating $700,000 for reimbursement of townships which abolished work tax in the fiscal years 1909 and 1910. This is in addition to one recently presented appropriating $600,000 to pay townships which abolished work tax in 1907 and 1908.

Governor Tener's public utilities bill regulating all public service corporations was introduced in the House on Monday. It abolishes the present State Railroad Commission and provides a new commission clothed with power to enforce its recommendations.

Dr. William Frear, of State College, appeared at Harrisburg on Tuesday in opposition to proposed legislation which would permit the use of saccharin in food products and soft drinks.

The procession was formed & moved in the following order:

Cavalry,
Infantry,
Guard,
Muffs,
Clergy.

The General's horse with his saddle, holsters and pistols.

Cols.
Sims,
Ramsay,
Payne.

Pall Bearers

CORPSE,
Cols.
Gilpin,
Martteller,
Little.

Pall Bearers

Mourners, Masonic Brethren, Citizens.

When the procession had arrived at the bottom of the elevated lawn, on the bank of the Potomac, where the family vault is placed, the cavalry halted, the infantry marched towards Mount Vernon and formed their lines. The Clergy, the Masonic Brothers, and the Citizens, descended to the Vault, and the funeral service of the Church was performed. The firing was repeated from the vessel in the river, and the sounds echoed from the woods and hills around.

Three discharges by the infantry—the cavalry, and 11 pieces of artillery, which lined the banks of the Potomac back of the Vault, paid the last tribute to the entombed Commander in Chief of the Armies of the United State and to the departed Hero.

The sun was now setting. Alas! the SON OF GLORY was set forever. No—the name of Washington—the American President and General—will triumph over Death. The unclouded brightness of his Glory will illuminate the future ages!

Affording some idea of the general news and advertising character of the columns of the interesting old paper, are the following extracts:

VISITOR, $45 & FRIEND FIGURE IN ODD MIX-UP

Drama in Dr. Fisher's Office.

IRV. DREESE THE HERO

Like Dr. Munyon, He Succeeds When all
Others Fail—Finds Missing Money in Lumberman's Pocket Which Others
Had Searched in Vain.

Wade Snook, an employe on the lumber job of Huyett & McNitt, at Waddle, came to Bellefonte on Wednesday, accompanied by his son, Lawrence, who is 15 years of age. His mission here was to consult Dr. P. S. Fisher, with reference to the health of his son, who has been ailing for some time. They went from the depot direct to Dr. Fisher's office, nearby Parrish's drug store. Not finding him in Mr. Snook went over to Parrish's drug store, thinking he might find him there. Mr. Parrish informed him that Dr. Fisher had gone out but would soon return. While waiting Mr. Snook explained his mission and stated further that he had brought with him money enough to square up a back account which he owed Dr. Fisher for medical services.

After waiting for a while and the Dr. failing to make his appearance, Mr. Snook started for Frank Bartley's livery stable, leaving his son at Dr. Fisher's office. At the livery stable he met John Jackson, of Lemont, and they started away together. They began taking social drinks, and finally the two wound up in Parrish's drug store where they met Dr. Fisher and accompanied him to his office, where he made an examination of the boy. Dr. Fisher returned to Parrish's drug store to prepare the medicine, leaving Jackson, Snook and the boy in the office. After preparing the prescription he returned to his office and found Mr. Snook in a condition that required medical attention. He returned to the drug store and while absent the boy went into an adjoining room and when he came back he claimed that he saw a man replacing a pocket-book into his father's inside pocket. When Dr. Fisher reappeared at the office Jackson said to have excused himself and started to the depot to take the 1.08 train. Several minutes later the boy told what he had seen. Dr. Fisher searched Mr. Snook's clothing and found a pocket-book containing $3.50. The boy said his father had $48 when he left home.

Dr. Fisher at once reported the circumstances to Policeman Harry Dukeman, who searched Mr. Snook and found $3.50. He then arrested Jackson at the depot and took him back to Dr. Fisher's office. The officer then searched Jackson but only found four one dollar bills which Jackson claimed he brought with him when he came to town in the morning. Presently Irvin Dreese, of Lemont, appeared on the scene, and said he knew Jackson, that he was an honest, upright man and that he would not take anything. Mr. Dreese then searched the clothing of Mr. Snook and brought forward $13. About 4 o'clock Mr. Dreese reported to Burgess John J. Bower that the balance of the money had been found on Mr. Snook. Policeman Harry Dukeman stated that Mr. Snook was bound over in the sum of $200, for a hearing before Squire Brown on April 15.

Wreck on Snow Shoe Road.

Monday afternoon, about 3 o'clock, a wreck occurred at the big fill on the Snow Shoe branch of the P. R. R. Three loaded coal cars, one local freight car and the passenger coach were derailed, the result of a broken flange. Fortunately no person was injured. The crew, with the engine, came to Bellefonte where a passenger coach was taken off the 4.40 train for the purpose of returning the passengers to Snow Shoe. The wreck crew from Tyrone was called to the scene and by 11 o'clock they had the wreckage cleared from the track. The regular crew was held here until 10.30 at night.

Fifty Acres in Fruit.

S. L. Faust, of State College, and wife, have arrived at Jersey Shore and will begin work on the fruit farm near that place, known as the Dewey farm, recently owned by J. P. Herritt. The farm and some adjoining land has been purchased by the Pennsylvania Fruit Farms company, of Williamsport. Fifty more acres of fruit trees will be planted, principally peach and apple, and a number of improvements will be made about the farm. Mr. Faust intends using the latest scientific methods, and improvements, in the raising of fruit.

BORO. AUDITORS DEMAND POSSESSION OF BOOKS

Would Bring Legal Proceedings
Against Bellefonte Council.

MAY APPEAL TO COURT

Dispute Over Question Whether Fiscal Year Ends on First Monday in March or First Monday in December—May Result in Two Audits.

Borough Auditors John Curtin, Charles Lukenbach and W. Miles Walker have filed a formal demand on the Council of Bellefonte borough for the borough books in order that the same may be audited. In the letter of the auditors it is set forth that unless the books are produced within ten days counsel will be employed and steps taken to secure possession through the courts.

Taking the ground that it is an open question as to when the fiscal year for the borough ends, Council have not complied with the demand of the borough auditors. Unless there is a shift in the program, the request will not be complied with and it will be up to the auditors to make good their threat to resort to legal procedure.

For the borough Council it is explained that it is an open question whether the borough fiscal year ends on the first Monday in March or on the first Monday in December. In years gone by the fiscal year closed on the former date, but since the making of numerous changes by constitutional amendments it is contended by some that the fiscal year does not end until the first Monday in December.

By those speaking for the borough Council it has been stated that the reason for opposing an audit of the borough books at this time is to save the taxpayers the expense of making a second audit, which would of course become necessary should it be decided that the borough year does not end until December.

Confusion on the same point has arisen in a number of boroughs throughout the State. Renovo, when confronted with the problem, referred the matter to the borough solicitor, who finally advised that two audits would be necessary, one for the year ending on the first Monday in March and the other for the period dating from that until the first Monday in December.

Reception to Pastor.

Rev. Ezra H. Vocum after an excellent service of eight years among the Methodists of Lewistown, arrived in Bellefonte on Friday evening and took up the reins of the Bellefonte Methodist church, succeeding Dr. Thomas S. Wilcox. Several hundred members gathered in the lecture room of the church at eight o'clock that evening to give him and his wife a cordial welcome. Dr. Ambrose M. Schmidt, president of the local ministerium, introduced the new pastor to the audience in a neat and appropriate speech. Mr. Vocum, in return, made a very pleasing address. Much of it was of a humorous character which at once impressed his hearers with the fact that he is one of the men of broadcloth who believes Christianity contains more of sunshine than clouds. His address therefore was very pleasing. One of the best testimonials to his efficiency as a minister of the gospel and his manly bearings outside the pulpit is his lengthy sojourn among the people of Lewistown.

On Sunday both morning and evening, the church was crowded with people to see and hear the new preacher. They found him to be a strong and powerful man in the pulpit. He is a very forcible speaker, and his sermons show much study and thought. There isn't any question but that he will be of great service to the community in aiding to build up the stronghold of Zion.

Rev. Vocum is a brother of the late Seth H. Vocum, formerly of Bellefonte, who years ago represented this district in Congress. Rev. Vocum will excuse a personal allusion by stating that our people have been greatly impressed with the close resemblance between him and the late Hon. John G. Love, especially in the manner of speaking and pressing his arguments. Mr. Love was a close friend of S. H. Vocum and often spoke from the same platform.

A Large Pay Roll.

On next Monday the Pennsylvania Railroad Co's pay car will leave Altoona. The strong metal boxes will contain $1,200,000. That is a mighty big pay roll for one month and just think how many happy families it will make.

A Goat and a Valentine

Instead of a Nuisance, Billy Becomes a Prime Favorite

By MARION C. ENRIGHT
Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Drusilla Fowler detested the Franklins' pet goat, for it had all but devastated her small domain during the summer. Flower beds had been trampled, shrubs uprooted, and as for the little kitchen garden near the orchard, the succulent heads of lettuce and later the hard cabbage balls had fallen victims to the insatiable appetite of Billy the goat.

Of course the Franklins were very sorry about it and tried to confine Billy within a hastily constructed fence, but that sagacious and resourceful animal had viewed the structure of wood and wire with a contemptuous eye before he utterly demolished it and resumed his invasion of Drusilla's garden. Drusilla hated him, and the Franklins loved him.

This crisp February morning Drusilla came to the glass door that led from her sitting room into the south porch, and, standing there bathed in the sunlight, she planned her garden for the coming year.

Now, Drusilla in her mind's eye could see the beds blooming once more with roses and plinks and sweet williams, phlox and marigolds and mignonette, while the baffled Billy peered through the panes.

Little Bessie Franklin ran through her own yard waving an envelope frantically. "Oh, mother," Drusilla heard her shout, "somebody has sent me a valentine!"

So this was St. Valentine's day. Drusilla's red lips pressed into a thin red line as she remembered that there was one other thing in the world she detested as heartily as she did the goat Billy, and that was St. Valentine's day. The hot color flew to her cheeks as she recalled events which had happened ten years before and which had thereafter made that anniversary a detestable day.

She had not been engaged to Gregory Ware, but on the 13th of February Gregory had said to her that there was something to be settled between them. "You'll know tomorrow, Drusilla, and you'll believe what you get, won't you?" he had whispered in an agony of embarrassment, for Gregory was the shiest man in the world.

And Drusilla had guessed that he was to confess his love in a valentine, and she was radiant with happiness, for she would joyfully believe anything he might say to her in the tender missive. So she had told him shyly that she would see what it said and so put him off while her heart was beating wildly.

Then the next day had come, and there was no valentine, and the next and the next, and it had never come. Drusilla had grown very stiff and hurt, and Gregory had never come to ask an explanation, and after awhile he went away to another village and found work there, and Little River saw him only occasionally and Drusilla not at all.

So Drusilla always avoided going to the postoffice on Valentine's day that she might evade even the appearance of being interested in the anniversary of the good saint. But today—and she frowned as she recollected it—there was a matter of sending a money order to the city that must be attended to, for an impetuous cousin had written and asked for a loan to tide over a financial difficulty. Drusilla Fowler was not a shirker where duty presented itself, and so she swallowed her repugnance and buttoned herself into a thick warm cloak and pinned on her most becoming hat, for Drusilla had pride in her appearance.

Her adventures began from the very moment she passed out of her own yard into the street. The Franklins' goat was hungrily browsing on the privet hedge that surrounded his master's yard, and as he turned his little evil eye on Drusilla she involuntarily uttered a vicious little "Scat!"

Billy wheeled about on the pivot of his hind legs, reared himself menacingly, dropped his head and made one dive after Drusilla Fowler. But she had gone. With the speed of an antelope she had picked up the skirts of her long cloak and darted down the street, the angry goat leaping after her with increasingly swift gait.

Men dashed to head him off and dodged his threatening horns; women screamed and took to the opposite side of the street; children scattered like chaff until there only remained on the long street the flying red cloak of Drusilla Fowler and the plunging gray coat of Billy after her.

The first building into which she might safely turn was the postoffice. It stood at the corner of the main street and the road that ran to the river. The doors were usually wide open even in this wintry weather, and there would be friendly hands to help her in and to close the portals against the invasion of Billy. Once she glanced behind and saw his waving gray whiskers and the glitter of his evil eye and renewed her speed.

At last the postoffice. Drusilla dashed across the street up the wide stone steps and reached the top as the frenzied goat clattered his hoofs on the bottom one. Drusilla was conscious that big familiar hands, warm and friendly, grasped her own and drew her to a place of safety behind a tall broad shouldered figure—Gregory Ware.

The goat bounded up the steps and slipped through the closing doors, his hoofs skating along the oiled floor; then he saw his reflection in the glass front of the tier of letter boxes and paused, staring, belligerent, bleating angrily.

Some one laid a tentative hand on his back and was rewarded with a vicious lunge. Billy renewed his gaze in the glass. He pawed the floor angrily; he bleated once more, and then before the horrified onlookers could prevent him he bent his head and crashed violently into the glass front, shattering it in a thousand flying fragments and toppling the whole structure on to the startled postmistress and her assistant.

Fortunately nobody was hurt, not even Billy the goat. The glass front of letter box No. 13 was impaled on one horn, and on the other was a fancy embossed envelope that inclosed a valentine. Somewhat subdued, he was captured by several citizens of Little River and tethered to the doorknob. Then one and all went forward to assist in restoring order in the chaos of mail matter.

Drusilla, pale and frightened, still hovered in the corner into which Gregory Ware had thrust her and which he had left without a word to help clear up the wreckage. Fanny Bicknell, the sharp faced, sandy haired little postmistress, pointed a skinny finger at Drusilla, while her little dark eyes flashed resentfully.

"I declare, Drusilla Fowler, ain't you got any better sense than to tag that goat of the Franklins into the postoffice? I expect the government will get after you. You've broke all the rules of the office. It says no dogs allowed inside, and that means goats and such. I thought you didn't take no stock in the Franklins' goat."

"I don't," retorted Drusilla, with spirit. "He chased me all the way down here. He's the bane of my life. You can look to Mr. Franklin for damages."

"I shall," said Miss Bicknell acidly, and then, addressing the men who were picking up glass preparatory to raising the fallen section of boxes, she added: "What you men fussing over there? Remember that's all government mail matter you're handling."

"Picking some of these letters out of the dirt under your boxes, Miss Fanny," said Gregory Ware grimly. "I should recommend that you have something done about your boxes. The whole thing is cracked and warped, and the mail box is full of cracks. Look under here where it stood!"

He pointed to a square dust outlined space on the floor where several yellowed and dirty missives were mingled with bits of dirt and splintered glass. "You're the postmistress, Miss Fanny. You'd better see what these letters are doing underneath the mailing box."

He stood back while the fussy little woman came forward and picked the letters out of the accumulated soil. She scanned them closely—there were three in all—and then she looked hesitatingly around the office.

"These must have slipped through the crack in the mailing box," she said after awhile. "Here's a bill from Fryer & Kermit for Anson Rowell. Come to think of it, Anson's dead this five years, and Fryer & Kermit went bankrupt anyway, so there's no harm done there! And here's a postal card for Mrs. Beebe, saying that Burns & Co. ain't got the sample of blue cloth she asked for, and, land, it's dated two years back, so that don't make no matter either, because Mrs. Beebe's wearing black now anyway."

And—here's a letter for—mercy me, are you there, Drusilla Fowler? Here, Gregory, give that letter to Drusilla while I boss these men." She thrust a yellowed embossed envelope into Gregory's hand and turned away.

He came toward Drusilla, his eyes fixed on the missive in his hand, his face white beneath its coat of tan. When he spoke his voice was thick with emotion.

"Drusilla, here's a letter Miss Fanny just found under the mailing box. Like as not it's been there all this last ten years, ever since I mailed it one night before Valentine's day. I never understood—why—you—never answered it," he said with slow emphasis as he took the letter from him. "Now I know, but I suppose it's too late."

She opened the missive with shaking fingers and drew from within a lacy and flowered valentine. Wreaths of roses and forgetmenots surrounded two loving hearts, and underneath was a printed verse that was heavily underscored in ink:

While I protest my heart is thine
If I would I could give a sign
To say you'll be my valentine.

And the name of Gregory Ware was signed to it, and the date was ten years ago! Drusilla stared at it until all the coldness had fled from her eyes and a great tenderness invaded her face. Ashamed to lift her betraying glance to his serious inquiring one, she pressed the valentine with unconscious grace to her heart.

"Oh, this ought to have come before—it ought to have come before!" she cried passionately.

"Is it too late now, Drusilla?" asked Gregory softly. "It's never too late to be happy—if you want to be," he suggested.

"I want to be," sighed Drusilla contentedly, and then later she added, "Who would have thought that goat of Franklin's would prove a blessing in disguise?"

Little River folk watched agape, and nobody but those two understood why Gregory Ware and Drusilla Fowler led the Franklins' pet goat home with such solicitude or why Gregory bought it afterward and changed its name to Valentine.

"It can browse in the south meadow. He'll make a nice playmate—for some body—some day," he added vaguely.

He Saw She Saw It.

As the man who writes little items for the paper sat getting himself fitted with a pair of shoes the other day he saw this happen. A woman was getting waited on by a clerk who wore on the third finger of his right hand a diamond twinkler weighing at least a carat and a quarter. He hadn't always worn a ring of that sort. It was new to him. He took a great deal of pride in his new ring. Oh, how it sparkled when the light was just right! Once or twice he got so interested in twisting it around on his finger with his thumb to a position where it would be most easily noticed by the woman customer that he forgot to finish lacing up the shoe she was trying on.

But he had succeeded in bringing the jewel to her attention. She had a sharp, leathery, suffragette face and a disposition to speak right out on things.

"I see it," she remarked in a refrigerated tone. "It's very pretty and attractive. You wear it with a good air of abandon too. I admire it exceedingly. After you've finished toying with it I wish you would go ahead and show me something else—something with not quite such a narrow toe."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Weighing Machines.

Weighing machines and scales of some kind were in use 1800 B. C. for it is said that Abraham at that time "weighed out" 400 shekels of silver, current money, with the merchant to Ephron, the Hittite, as payment for a piece of land, including the cave and all the standing timber "in the field and in the fence." This is said to be the earliest transfer of land of which any record survives and that the payment was made in the presence of witnesses. The original form of the weighing scale was probably a bar suspended from the middle, with a board or shell suspended from each end, one to contain the weight, the other to contain the matter to be weighed. The steelyard was probably so called from the material of which it was made and from its former length. It is also known as the Roman balance and is of great antiquity.

The Spinning Mule.

Samuel Crompton, a boy of sixteen, copied the best features of the spinning machine invented by Hargreaves and Arkwright, added to them some of his own, and, after three months of anxious and secret experimenting, produced the first spinning mule, so called because it was a kind of hybrid between Hargreaves' jenny and Arkwright's water frame. The raw apprentice had was, however, no match in cunning for the cotton lords, who soon found out the secret of his new machine and shamelessly robbed him of the fruits of his ingenuity. Many years afterward, it is true, they used their influence to secure for him a parliamentary grant of £5,000, but he was then a broken hearted and disappointed man, to whom the money came too late to be of any real service.

The Human Riddle.

One of the strangest problems of our inexplicable nature is the choice of evil and the rejection of good, even after long experience has proved that misery and evil are synonymous. Virtue, it is true, does not always exempt from sorrow, but crime must ever be wretchedness. Hope loses its balm, and fear acquires a keener sting. The present is anxiety, the past remorse, the future is despair, and yet the wayward man drinks the bitter cup when the sweet is offered to him and launches his boat upon an angry sea, where storms attend his course and shipwreck terminates his voyage, rather than glide down the smooth current of a tranquil stream where peace pilots him on the way and happiness waits him on the shore.—Exchange.

The Term "Bully."

The term bully in the days of Shakespeare had quite a different meaning from that which it has at present, being an expression of endearment and good fellowship. Some suppose that the word, when it is used in approval, is derived from the Dutch boel or German buhe, which stands for the English lover. The harsher use of the word is, however, to be traced to below, the root of bull, with a significance of noisy blustering.

Peruna the Household Remedy

Mrs. Maria Goertz, Orienta, Oklahoma, writes:

"My husband, children and myself have used your medicines, and we always keep them in the house in case of necessity. I was restored to health by this medicine, and Dr. Hartman's invaluable advice and books. People ask about me from different places, and are surprised that I can do all of my housework alone, and that I was cured by the doctor of chronic catarrh. My husband was cured of asthma, my daughter of earache and catarrh of the stomach, and my son of catarrh of the throat. When I was sick I weighed 100 pounds; now I weigh 140. 'I have regained my health again, and I cannot thank you enough for your advice. May God give you a long life and bless your work.'"

New Job For Dad.

Part of the husband's duty is to help with the family washing, was the ruling made by Alderman Donahue in his court at Wilkes-Barre, on Saturday. Arthur Coulston was a complainant against his wife, whom he charged with neglecting her household duties, one of the specifications being that complainant did not have clean clothes to wear. The magistrate dismissed the case after hearing the wife's story. He told the husband that when his better half was busy with other household work it was his duty to help with the family washing and that no man should be above it.

Roofing Guarantees.

When a maker guarantees his roofing, it merely means that he puts his claims for it in writing, and if there is any dispute afterwards, there are thousands of ways in which the maker can evade responsibility if he chooses.

The makers of Congo Roofing, however, have devised an interesting plan which gives the buyer absolute protection. With each roll of roofing is furnished a Surety Bond issued by the National Surety Company of New York, guaranteeing the faithful performance of the guarantee by the manufacturers. This gives to any possible complainant a Court of Appeals to which he can go, over the head of the manufacturer. In fact, this guarantee bond so pledges that if the manufacturers of Congo Roofing should go bankrupt or close out their business, the Surety Company would still continue to guarantee the reliability and satisfaction of Congo Roofing. The guarantee on the two or three ply is for 10 years.

WONDERFUL NERVE

Joseph Christock Adjusted the Noose About His Neck Before Hanged.

Declining the proffered assistance of a priest and deputy sheriff, Joseph Christock, of Pottsville, walked from his cell smiling and upon reaching the foot of the gallows lightly ran up the steps and waved a greeting to the crowd assembled to see his execution, on Friday of last week.

He reached up, grasped the noose and placed it around his neck, placed his hands by his side to be strapped down, waved a smiling farewell and said "Good bye, all," and then held his head so the black cap might be readily adjusted. In another moment the trap had sprung and twelve minutes later he was pronounced dead from strangulation and dislocation of the vertebrae.

It was the most wonderful display of nerve ever given in Schuylkill county and he made good his boast that he would not falter and that he wanted to die.

Before being led to the gallows Christock made a complete confession of the murder of aged Mrs. Anna Richards, at Auchey, on November 16, of last year, and of the criminal assault on her daughter, Mrs. Peter Faulstich. He also confessed to numerous highway robberies and burglaries and said that he deserved to be executed for his crimes.

While expressing sorrow for the killing of Mrs. Richards, who was like a mother to him, he said, he never for a moment lost his nerve and expressed a desire to be permitted to place the noose around his own neck.

Christock was the most remarkable prisoner ever in the county prison as he actually gained seven pounds in weight during the past week. He joked of death up until the end. Christock denied his statement made on the stand that he shot Mrs. Richards because she ran at him with a butcher knife.

He said she was smiling and about to talk to him when he turned the shot gun on her and fired. It was a public execution, passing being given to almost all who desired to see it, and there were about 1,500 crowded into the jail yard.

This is Life.

Man comes into this world without his consent and leaves it against his will. During his stay on earth his time is spent in one continuous round of contraries and misunderstandings. In his infancy he is an angel; in his boyhood he is a devil; in his manhood he is everything from a lizard up. In his duties he is a fool; if he raises a family he is a chump; if he raises a check he is a thief and the law raises—with him. If he's a poor man he's a poor manager and has no sense; if he is rich he is dishonest but considered smart, if he is in politics he is a grafter and a crook; if he is out of politics you can't place him—he is an undesirable citizen. If he goes to church he is a hypocrite; if he stays away from church he is a sinner. If he donates to foreign missions he does it for show; if he doesn't he is a tight-wad. When he first comes into the world everybody wants to kiss him—before he goes out everybody wants to kick him. If he dies young there was a great future in front of him; if he lives to a ripe old age he is in the way—only living to save funeral expenses.

Life is a funny proposition after all.—Exchange.

Dr. John A. Bouse.

Dr. John A. Bouse, special State medical inspector, died at his home in Old Orchard Wednesday of last week, after a long illness of heart trouble. For three days his condition was critical. His son, John A., Jr., arrived from Mexico Tuesday after a dash across the country to the bedside of his father.

Dr. Bouse had resided in Harrisburg for several years, going there from Chambersburg, where he practiced medicine. He was born in Maryland, June 14, 1852. His father was the Rev. George W. Bouse, a Methodist clergyman. Dr. Bouse attended Gettysburg college and later entered the University of Pennsylvania, where he graduated in medicine in 1875. In later years he was prominent in Royal Arcanum circles and quite often came to Bellefonte on missions connected with that order. He therefore, was very well known here.

He leaves a widow, two sons, John A., Jr., of Mexico, and Robert L., of Philadelphia. Miss Virginia M., a daughter, resides at home. Funeral services were held at the family residence Saturday at 4 o'clock.

IN THE MESHES OF THE LAW

Bell Telephone Co. Rounds up a Crowd for Stealing Copper Wire.

Friday's Phillipsburg Journal says that on Monday of last week W. F. Carolus inspector and lineman for the Bell Telephone Company, that city, discovered that three coils of new copper wire, aggregating 641 pounds in weight, had been stolen. He immediately notified his superiors at Altoona, and who in turn reported it to Chief of Detectives H. W. Hagerty, of the Bell Telephone Co., Philadelphia, who detailed Detective John F. Devine, also of Philadelphia, on the case.

Detective Devine learned that a junk dealer of Phillipsburg by the name of H. Garfinkle had shipped two barrels marked brass to a firm of junk dealers at Lock Haven. He went thither to make an examination, and found that the barrels contained 218 pounds of new copper wire with a little brass on the top to conceal the contents.

After recovering this wire Detective Devine came to Phillipsburg and with the assistance of Chief of Police S. M. Sankey and Lineman Carolus arrested Robert M. Cartwright, aged 19 years; Edward Osewalt, aged 19 years; Daniel Ryder, aged 16 years; Harry Smith, aged 18 years; Roy (Dewey) Stratton, aged 20 years, all of Point Lookout, and Harry Rodgers, aged 19 years, of Chester Hill. They each made written confessions admitting stealing the wire and selling it to Hyman Garfinkle for 5 cents a pound. They were given a hearing before Justice of the Peace J. E. Hawkins, where they all pleaded guilty and were held under $300 bail each for court. They have all been released on bail.

The arrest of Garfinkle, who is supposed to be out of town, is expected soon. Practically all the wire has been recovered, part of it having been secreted in Moshannon creek.

Night School Practical.

The Williamsport Gazette and Bulletin says that the Pennsylvania State College has demonstrated in its two years of work in this city with a night vocational school that there is nothing experimental or impractical in the idea, but that, on the contrary it has been made extremely useful in giving education along practical vocational lines to men who want certain knowledge but who could not go to the college to obtain it. The school has been under the charge of Mr. Barbey this winter and his work has stamped him as the right man in the right place. Last winter the foundations were laid for a most successful work and this year Mr. Barbey has built well upon that foundation.

The enrollment in the school this winter has been 95 students. Of these 42 have been studying machine designing and mechanical drafting, 14 studying structural designing, 18 in the architectural and building course, nine in electric lighting and wiring, six in mathematics and six miscellaneous.

Thirty-nine business firms are represented in the 95 men who have received instruction this year. The pupils are received without age limit and their average has been about 25 years. The oldest pupil was 38 years old. Many came for the purpose of obtaining knowledge in some one particular line of activity and as a consequence the enrollment changes from time to time as men obtain what they need and leave the school, others coming to take their places.

The average attendance for the term has been 34 and the school has placed four of its pupils in positions for which they were fitted. The largest number of students from any one corporation or firm are from the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad company's employ, which company sends six men. All the other manufacturing establishments in the city are represented by two or more.

A High Tribute.

Editor Short, of the Clearfield Republican, in speaking of a former Bellefonte young man says: "Dr. M. E. Swartz and family left Friday for their new home in York. They leave Clearfield with the best wishes of all our people, regardless of religious affiliations. During the five years Dr. Swartz has been pastor of Trinity M. E. church he has at all times in and out of the pulpit been the ideal clergyman and true American gentleman. While loyal as a needle to the pole to his own church, he always respected the faith of his neighbor and ever displayed that admirable trait of paying strict attention to his own business, a part which now and then seems sadly lacking in 'men of the cloth' of all denominations. Everybody bids Dr. Swartz God-speed and continued success, a long, happy, prosperous, useful career."

A Reliable Medicine—Not A Narcotic.

Mrs. F. Marti, St. Joe, Mich., says: "Our little boy contracted a severe bronchial trouble and as the doctor's medicine did not cure him, I gave him Foley's Honey and Tar Compound in which I have great faith. It cured the cough as well as the choking and gagging spells, and he got well in a short time. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound has many times saved us much trouble and we are never without it in the house." Sold by C. M. Parrish, Bellefonte.

A Long Beard.

Valentine Tepley, of Pike county, Missouri, who for many years is supposed to have held the record for wearing the longest beard in the world, had his luxuriant hirsute growth cast in the shade on Wednesday morning by a passenger on the immigrant train, which "Uncle Joe" Nathanson took west from New York.

The new champion, Jig Baganascione, from Haparaanda, where there is nine months winter and three months summer, had under his coat a beard that was over nine foot long and which, after being wrapped about his head, dragged more than a foot on the ground. He stated that he had never been shaved since he was old enough and was exceedingly proud of his growth of hair.

He claims that he has the longest beard in the world and was on his way to Oklahoma, where he expects to get a position with a museum, to show his beard at their performances. He stated, since the women of America have taken to wearing so much false hair, he has several times been offered large prices for his beard, but that he always refused and will not part with the beard for any sum.

Good results always follow the use of Foley Kidney Pills. They give prompt relief in all cases of kidney and bladder disorders. Try them. Sold by C. M. Parrish, Bellefonte.

Horses vs. Automobiles.

It is rumored that quite a number of new automobiles will be purchased by Bellefonte people this summer and a few cars also sold to gentlemen living in the several townships in the vicinity of Bellefonte. It might be that the farmers might hitch them to their plows instead of horses. When a good team of horses brings from $1000 to $1400 it is high time for our farmers to adopt the automobile plan of farming. They can sell their horses and buy a first class automobile and make money in the deal.

One Conductor Helped Back to Work.

Mr. Winford Adams is his name, and he writes: "I was confined to my bed with chronic rheumatism and used two bottles of Foley's Kidney Remedy with good effect. The third bottle put me on my feet and I resumed work as conductor on the Lexington, Ky., Street Railway. It will do all you claim in cases of rheumatism." It clears the blood of uric acid. Sold by C. M. Parrish, Bellefonte.

Centre Co. Apples are Fine.

Prof. John P. Stewart, of State College, who has been conducting an investigation and making experiments, declares that Pennsylvania is the best State in America for the cultivation of apples, the flavor of the fruit produced here being the best. It is also said by experts that apples grown in Centre county have no superior.

Business Makes For Poor Standards.

Visiting the blame for the poor standard of men of today on the commercialism of the age, Bishop Charles E. Woodcock, of Kentucky, preached a fine sermon in Philadelphia recently the following being only a part of the learned discourse:

Bishop Woodcock declared that too many men who work for others today sell not only their bodies, but their individuality and their souls as well. He said that men today were becoming more and more the dead parts of a dead machine, when they should be the live organisms of a living machine.

"Guard your individuality and your personality against the encroachments of the man to whom you have hired your vitality. The men who retain their personalities are the men of today."

"To them we are no longer erecting crosses in the market places. Each one is a living cross by himself to be looked up to and respected, if not loved, for his good deeds and his righteous life."

"The impression is broadcast that a man cannot be in business and honest too. That is not true. A man who is dishonest cannot be in business, for his fellow business men would soon drive him out."

Bishop Woodcock then went on to say that a great many men today are living on the reputation of their fathers. "A man who has a million is not worth a million. He is worth only that which he contributed to the community in social and civic righteousness, in religion and in better living; in showing others how a righteous life should be spent."

"Character is not a birthright; it cannot be inherited, and therefore if your father did possess an excellent character you cannot only not possess any yourself, but you can help to defame him."

"A man's character is not what he is in the dark. It is what he is in his home. A man must be half-way decent to his business associates, for he expects to get something from them. But go into his home if you want to know who he really is."

"Generally debilitated for years. Had sick headaches, lacked ambition, was worn-out and all run-down. Burdock Blood Bitters made me a well woman."

Going After the Convention.

Public enterprise promoters of Baltimore are going after the National Democratic convention for 1912 and have guaranteed a fund of $100,000 to entertain the delegates. The first national political convention was held in Baltimore in 1831, when Henry Clay was nominated by the Whigs, and it also saw the first National Democratic convention when, in 1832, Andrew Jackson was nominated for his second term. The Democrats continued holding their national conventions in the Monumental City until 1856, when James Buchanan was nominated in Cincinnati, the same year that the first National Republican convention was held at Philadelphia, nominating John C. Fremont. The Republicans nominated Abraham Lincoln at Chicago in 1860. It is thought highly probable that if the Democrats select the east for their convention the Republicans will go west.

All My Pimples Gone.

Girl Tells How a Blotchy Skin Was Cleansed by a Simple Wash.

"I was ashamed of my face," writes Miss Minnie Pickard of Altamahaw, N. C. "It was all full of pimples and scars, but after using D. D. D. Prescription I can say that now there is no sign of that Eczema, and that was three years ago."

D. D. D. has become so famous as a cure and instant relief in Eczema and all other serious skin diseases, that its value is sometimes overlooked in clearing up rash, pimples, blackheads, and all other minor forms of skin impurities.

The fact is, that while D. D. D. is so penetrating that it strikes to the very root of Eczema or any other serious trouble, the soothing Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol and other ingredients are so carefully compounded there is no wash for the skin made that can compare with this great household remedy for every kind of skin trouble.

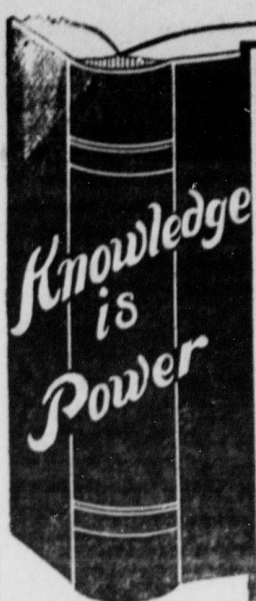

D. D. D. is pleasant to use, perfectly harmless to the most delicate skin, and absolutely reliable. A 25 cent bottle will give you positive proof of the wonderful effectiveness of this great remedy.

Was Lincoln Pallbearer.

Simon Barr, of Altoona, the only surviving pallbearer of Abraham Lincoln, on Friday celebrated his 71st birthday anniversary. There were twelve pallbearers for the great war president and Mr. Barr was the only one left. The eleventh died a little over three years ago. Mr. Barr was first sergeant in the Veteran Reserves when he carried Lincoln's body.

He was born in Hollidaysburg on April 1, 1840, and there grew to manhood, learning the trade of a carpenter. He was among the first to offer his service for his country, as he enlisted in the three months' service when Lincoln called for volunteers. He re-enlisted on September 14, 1861, and was wounded at the battle of Chancellorsville, receiving a gunshot wound on the hip. He again re-enlisted on April 14, 1864, and in July 12, of the same year, received another severe wound in the leg, while he was in command of his company. After his brilliant career in the war for the preservation of the union of his country, Mr. Barr returned to Hollidaysburg and later took up his residence in this city, having followed the trade of carpenter for many years.—Altoona Tribune.

Gov. Tener Making Good.

Critics of Governor Tener are finding themselves agreeably disappointed in the manner in which he is "making good" at Harrisburg. In the short time that he has been in office Governor Tener has sized up to the situation in a manner that has completely disarmed those who tried to believe that with his advent at Harrisburg everything would go to the bow-wow.

A few days ago Governor Tener rudely shocked some persons by vetoing a bill that, because of the loose way in which it had been drafted, opened up the way to unlimited expenditure of funds from the State Treasury. The bill in question gave a blanket-like authority for the republishing of countless editions of certain pamphlets. When it reached the desk of Governor Tener he promptly vetoed it. He declared that he was in entire sympathy with the intention of the authors of the bill, namely to disseminate information among citizens of Pennsylvania. The Governor's reason for vetoing the bill was that it did not specify what amount should be spent for the publication and carry an appropriation to meet the expense thus incurred. As drafted and passed by the Legislature, the bill would have paved the way for spending a large amount of money and with no check or curb on those ordering the additional expense. Quick to see through the scheme, Governor Tener closed the door to any possible fraud or extravagance by nullifying the bill.

In the early days of the present Legislature Governor Tener, quietly but none the less effectively, stopped a plan to order a recess of several weeks in the session. His reason was that such a recess would be attended with unnecessary expense to the State. His argument was that the best way to attend to business was to attend to it and then adjourn. His will prevailed and the Legislature settled down to the task of disposing of matters before it.

Every session of the Legislature has its allotment of so-called "pinch" bills—bills drafted and introduced, not for the purpose of passage but to frighten individuals or firms who might be affected, and with the hope that they will be steered into paying a price to have the measures dropped from the calendar. Following the example of Governor Stuart, Governor Tener has in a very pointed manner let it be known that persons who introduce "pinch" bills place themselves in the position of having their legitimate measures vetoed.

With the exception of a brief visit to some nearby city or town, to attend some public function, Governor Tener has been at his desk with unfailing regularity, from day to day, thus making it possible for legislators and others to meet him and at the same time setting a wholesome example for other public servants. It is an easy matter for anybody on a legitimate mission to secure an audience with Governor Tener. As a business man he disposes of affairs in a prompt, business-like way. With it all, he manifests a desire to familiarize himself with the needs of the people at large, rather than those of any particular class or party.

During the recent campaign "The Republican" steadfastly adhered to the firm conviction that Mr. Tener, if elected, would "make good" at Harrisburg. To those who aided him in fighting his fight, against odds that at times were discouraging and against methods that were unmanly, unjust and unfair, Governor Tener's course at Harrisburg is not only cause for gratification but is a rebuke to those who so shamefully attempted his ruin in order to improve the chances for election of another candidate.

WILLIAM HURLEY DEAD

Prominent Citizen and Soldier Passes Away at Philipsburg.

Death, on Friday, last, ended the long and useful career of William Hurley, a prominent citizen and old soldier of Philipsburg and father of Sheriff W. E. Hurley, of this place. The end came suddenly. Mr. Hurley had been ill but a few days. Stricken with neuralgia of the heart, he lingered but a short time and then passed into restful sleep about 4 o'clock on Friday afternoon. The final summons came to him at the home of a daughter, Mrs. Duke Capelin, with whom he had lived in more recent years. Funeral services were held on Monday morning, interment being made at Roaring Springs by side of the grave of his wife, who before her marriage was Miss Josephine Henderson and who was called to her reward twelve years ago.

Mr. Hurley was born in Hagerstown, Maryland, 81 years ago, but in early life removed to Pennsylvania and spent the greater number of his years in Blair and Bedford counties. After the death of his wife he lived with his children, in Philipsburg, whose devoted care added to his comfort and enjoyment in the closing years of his life.

During the Civil war Mr. Hurley served with bravery and fidelity in defense of the Union. He was a member of Co. E, 84th Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers. At the battle of Spottsylvania he was shot through the shoulder. In later years he manifested a keen interest and exerted a strong influence in the Grand Army of the Republic, and at the time of his death was commander of John W. Geary Post, No. 90, G. A. R., of Philipsburg. He was also prominently identified with the Bedford Lodge I. O. O. F.

Mourning the death of a kind and loving father are the following children: W. E. Hurley, Bellefonte; George Hurley, Mrs. Duke Capelin, Philipsburg; Mrs. John Posk, Philipsburg; Mrs. A. B. Galbraith, Huntingdon; Mrs. Howard Fleck and Mrs. Milda Daniels, Altoona.

Mrs. Albon Baney Dead.

Anna Viola, wife of Albon Baney, of near Fowler, died Sunday afternoon at 1 o'clock in the Bellefonte hospital from tuberculosis of the bowels. She had been ill about nine weeks, seven of which were spent in the hospital, where everything was done to effect a cure but the efforts were useless. The deceased was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Houtz, of Lemont, and was 47 years of age on the 14th of last January. For years she had been a consistent member of the United Brethren church and lived an upright life. She had hosts of friends who will be sorry to hear of her demise. She is survived by her husband, parents and the following children: Mrs. Ira Nearhoff, of near Fowler; Harry Baney, of Woodland, Clearfield county; Cornelius Baney, living with his grand-children, at Lemont, and Hilda, with her married sister, near Fowler. She is also survived by the following brothers and sisters: Clarence A. Houtz, Mrs. G. W. Williams, Harry F. Houtz and Mrs. Nelson W. Nelson, all of Lemont. The funeral was held Wednesday morning at 9:30 o'clock, interment being made in the cemetery at Shiloh.

William Rothrock Dead.

William T. Rothrock, one of Philipsburg's oldest citizens, died at his home on Front street, Wednesday evening, March 29, aged 85 years, 1 month and 20 days. Mr. Rothrock had been ailing for several years past, and his death was not unexpected. He was born in Union county, but spent much of his life in Clearfield county, where he found his wife, Miss Mary Jane Flegal, of Morris township, who after nearly sixty-two years of married life, survives him. A large family of children were born to them, of whom five still live, viz. James and Orin, Mrs. Jesse Owens, Mrs. Michael Magwire and Mrs. Jerry Funk, all of Philipsburg. A brother and two sisters also survive, Jonathan Rothrock, living near Wallacetown; Mrs. Mary Shimmel, of Morrisdale, and Mrs. J. A. Albert, of South Philipsburg.

Death of Lena Kohlbecker.

On Friday Miss Lena, daughter of the late Alois Kohlbecker, of Milesburg, died suddenly at a sanitarium at Polk, Vanango county, where she had been for the last eleven years. Had she lived until the 13th of June she would have been 20 years of age. Her remains were brought to Milesburg on Saturday and on Monday morning the funeral took place from the Catholic church, Bellefonte. Interment was made in the Catholic cemetery. Her surviving brothers and sisters are as follows: Henry J., of Milesburg; Frank, of Bellvernon; Lewis, of Jeannette; Mrs. Felix Valmont, of Keywaden; A. A. Jr., Stella, Emma, Frances and Josephine of Milesburg.

Death of a Former Resident.

Through the kindness of H. M. Fleishman, of Philadelphia, word was this week received at "The Republican" office of the death on Friday last, of Moses Klein, who passed away at his late home at Lynn, Mass. Mr. Klein was aged 87 years. He resided at Bellefonte 35 years ago, having eight children born here. In August, last, Mr. and Mrs. Klein celebrated their fifty-fifth wedding anniversary. The family will be recalled by the older residents of this place. At one time Mr. Klein, while residing here, was leader of the Bellefonte band.

Death Came Suddenly to Mrs. Waite.

Death came very suddenly to Mrs. Anna Waite, of Bellefonte, on Monday afternoon, about 3 o'clock. At dinner time she ate heartily with the family at her home on South Thomas Street. Soon afterward she went to the stove and sat down for the purpose of getting warm. Finally her daughter saw her put her hands to her head and when asked whether it hurt she answered yes. Soon afterwards she became very ill and died without suffering. Thus she calmly passed into the great beyond where there are no more tears or trouble. The cause of her demise was apoplexy. About two years ago Mrs. Waite suffered from a stroke of paralysis. She, however, was gradually recovering, when on the first of last November she fell, breaking her left limb near the thigh. Although nearly 79 years of age she gradually recovered from the accident and was able to go about the house without the aid of a cane. Considering her age her recovery was remarkable.

Mrs. Waite was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Eyer, of Warriors Mark, Huntingdon County. Some years ago they moved into Half Moon Valley where her husband died in 1873. In 1894 the family moved to Bellefonte and have been here ever since. Her age was 79 years and 18 days, most of which was spent serving her Master. From youth she had been a member of the United Brethren church and always was found in her pew when it was possible. She took a deep interest in the progress of the church by lending a helping hand in all its undertakings. She was faithful to every trust and Christian duty, thus she is now reaping a reward of eternal bliss and happiness. In time of need and sore distress she was a friend to everybody, be they rich or poor.

She is survived by eleven children who are as follows: J. S. Waite, of Lock Haven; J. Edward Waite, of Hazelton; H. A. Waite, of Altoona; H. B. and W. W. of Stormstown; Mrs. Blair Stevens, of Kermorran, Pa.; Mrs. James Forey, of Woodland, Clearfield county; Miss Sarah J. Waite, of Wilkinsburg; Miss Laura Waite, of Northfield; Miss Ella and Darius Waite, at home. She is also mourned by the following brothers and sisters: Jeremiah Eyer, of the state of Washington; C. V. Eyer, of Tyrone; Mrs. Amanda Meyer, of Warriors Mark and Mrs. M. J. McClay of Wilkinsburg. The funeral will take place to-day at 12:30 o'clock from the United Brethren church. Interment will be made in Gray's cemetery, Half Moon.

Mrs. Anna Ward.

Mrs. Anna Ward, widow of the late Samuel Ward, and an aunt of Dr. J. E. Ward, of Bellefonte, died Thursday morning at her home at Baileyville, of diseases incident to her advanced age. The venerable lady had reached the age of 76 years and was highly respected by all who knew her. She had been a member of the Presbyterian church since childhood and loved to worship in the sanctuary. Her long life was devoted to those who were in need. Her husband preceded her to the grave a number of years ago. Her surviving children are Mrs. John Roob, of Harrisburg; Mrs. B. Hess, of Baileyville; Isaac Ward of Ohio; Warren Ward, of Baileyville; and Elliot Ward, of Washington, Pa. She is also survived by two brothers and one sister: Samuel Irvin of Lewistown; William Irvin, of Pennsylvania Furnace, and Mrs. G. H. Olewine, of Altoona. The funeral took place on Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock, Rev. Mr. Campbell officiating. Interment was made at Graysville.

Another Sudden Death.

Tuesday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock Mrs. John Cunningham, one of Philipsburg's most excellent ladies, died very unexpectedly from convulsions. The deceased was formerly Miss Grace Murphy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Murphy, of Lewistown. She was born July 21, 1882, making her age 28 years, 8 months and 14 days. She was married on September 23, 1903, to John Cunningham, of Philipsburg, who survives, together with two interesting little daughters, Margaretta and Elizabeth. Two brothers, Ralph, of Lewistown, and Charles, of Altoona, also survive. She was a devoted member of the Lutheran church, and a lady of lovely christian character, greatly endearing herself to all who knew her. Funeral services, in charge of Rev. George M. Glenn, in the absence of the Lutheran pastor, were held on Wednesday afternoon at 1 o'clock, immediately after which the body was taken to Lewistown, where interment was made.

Miss Rye Tate Dead.

Miss Rye Tate, daughter of the late Scott Tate, of Pleasant Gap, died in the Bellefonte hospital, Thursday afternoon about 3 o'clock, after an operation for appendicitis. A week prior to that time she walked to the hospital and soon submitted herself for the operation. Her case, from the first, was extremely critical, thus little hope for her recovery was entertained. She was a comparatively young woman and was born and raised at Pleasant Gap. When informed that her time on earth was fast drawing to a close she asked for a minister to baptize her. Rev. C. W. Winey, pastor of the United Brethren church, was called and performed the rites. He, with Rev. C. C. Shuey, remained with her until the vital spark had fled. She possessed a sympathetic heart, willing at all times to go out of her way to do a favor for those who needed assistance. Her parents have been dead for a number of years and surviving her are the following brothers and sisters: Life and John, of Pleasant Gap; Mrs. Bruce Baney, Mrs. John Love and Edith, of Bellefonte; Mrs. Samuel Gibson, of Lewistown; Elizabeth, of Philadelphia, and Margaret, of Johnstown. The remains were taken to the home of her sister, Mrs. John Love, on Willowbank Street. The funeral was held on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment was made at Pleasant Gap.

Mrs. Charles Palmer Dead.

Mrs. Charles Palmer, aged 39 years, died Saturday afternoon at the home of Miss Sarah Eckley, near Hunter's Park. She had been ill for two years with tuberculosis. She spent some time at Mt. Alto with the hope of improving her condition but the treatment failed to bring the desired results. Mrs. Palmer was the daughter of Adolphus and Margaret Lingaton and was born in Half Moon valley. Her mother was a sister of the late William B. Eckley who resided along Muncy mountain, above Coleville. The deceased was a member of the Presbyterian church and lived an upright, christian life, being of a kindly disposition. She had hosts of warm friends who will be lonely without her. Her husband died in Bradford about six years ago, leaving one son, James, who is seven years of age. She is also survived by the following brothers and sisters: Harry Lingaton, of Bradford; John Lingaton, whose whereabouts are unknown; Elsie Elmer and Bertha, of Virginia. Some time ago her brother, Clarence, died in Virginia. The funeral took place Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock from the home of Miss Eckley. Rev. W. K. Harnish, of Lemont, officiated. Interment in Meyer's cemetery by the side of her husband.

Mrs. Elizabeth Sellers.

On Sunday afternoon at 12 o'clock, Mrs. Elizabeth Sellers, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. T. Wilson Way, at West Chester Pa. About one week ago Mrs. Sellers became ill with a gripe and on account of her advanced age she was unable to withstand the ravages of the disease. Mrs. Sellers was born in Warrior's Mark valley about 83 years ago. She resided in Stormstown many years, later going to West Chester to make her home with her daughter, Mrs. Way. Her husband Simon Sellers, preceded her to the grave about twelve years ago. Mrs. Sellers was a devoted member of the Methodist Episcopal church. Surviving to mourn her death are the following children: John W. Sellers, of Tyrone; Mrs. T. Wilson Way, of West Chester, and W. H. Sellers, of Philadelphia. She is also survived by the following brother and sisters: P. W. Burket, Stormstown; Mrs. G. W. Burket, of Tyrone, and Mrs. Mary Lever, of Stormstown. On Wednesday morning interment was made at Gray's cemetery, near Stormstown.

Death on Marsh Creek.

Anday Walker, of Marsh Creek, died Monday morning after a short illness from pneumonia. His age was 78 years, 5 months and 2 days. His wife preceded him to the grave some years ago, but he is survived by a number of children. The funeral took place Wednesday. Interment at Advent church.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease, that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Law Halts Work on Spring Creek Bridge.

The matter been handled more publicly. As I understand it the contract was signed last September. Now, in order that the law may be lived up to, the matter cannot be brought before two Grand Juries and approved by the Court, as is necessary, before September. Had the matter been taken up properly in the first place it could have been before the necessary two Grand Juries and approved by the Court by this time and we could now go ahead without any obstacle. As I have said, the Commissioners are very sorry but they will not proceed along any line not authorized by law.

President Harper, of Council, suggested that under the circumstances the resolution be withdrawn, which was done. He then directed the Street Committee to inquire further into the matter and see what could be done to meet the emergency.

In its present condition, one-half of the bridge is torn up. The other half has not been disturbed and is in daily use. It is understood that nothing further will be done for the present, that the torn-up section of the bridge will be put back into place and that meanwhile the method of procedure to secure a new bridge will be one strictly in keeping with the law.

On An Endless Journey.

On Saturday Harry Taylor, the genial and enterprising agent for the Adams Express Company, at Bellefonte, received the most remarkable express package ever consigned to the local office. When the package was tossed from the Tyrone train, Harry gave it one look and then recalled that it was "All Fools Day." His first impulse was to toss it back into the car, but being a faithful agent of the company, he loaded the package onto a truck and hauled it with others to his office. When he had time to examine the package he found it to be the annual and time-honored joke of express agents all along the line. At first glance one would have supposed the package to be a satchel that had been caught between two colliding trunks and smashed beyond all hope of recognition. Once upon a time, possibly, it was a handsome satchel, but that must have been long ago. There was not much left but the steel rims and handle and a few shreds of the canvass sides. Express company tags from offices located in all parts of the country were pasted or tied to what was left of the satchel, telling the story of its endless journey from one place to another. An old gum shoe and the rim of a derby hat were tied to the handle of the satchel, both being literally plastered with tags. That many an agent of the company had smiled as he passed the traveler along was evidenced by one tag showing that the satchel had visited the Pacific coast, while another silently testified to it having been down in Florida enjoying the summer breezes of the tropics. Almost every tag bore some inscription, now and then in the form of a conundrum. That the freakish looking package was no infant was manifested by the inscription on one tag, attached by the agent of a western office, which read: "I had this 18 years ago." Agent Taylor added a tag from the Bellefonte office and shipped the old satchel on its way, its next stopping place being Lock Haven.

The County at a Glance.

Howard.

Mrs. John B. Holter is visiting at Coal Centre.

Eugene Kline arrived home from Coalport last week for a vacation.

Prof. and Mrs. Samuel Robb, of Milesburg, visited relatives here on Sunday.

Mrs. George Wister and daughter Sara have returned from an extended visit to Chicago and the west.

Harry Vaudes, R. P. Confer, Gault Brothers and Mrs. George Dietz are now shipping milk to The Continental Milk Condensary, which recently began operations at Mill Hall.

Charles Fletcher, our enterprising young blacksmith, this week received a carload of new huggies which he purposed selling to residents of the community at reasonable prices.

Miss Florence Confer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Confer, and a graduate of the High School, will spend a summer school for primary and intermediate scholars on April 17th.

Lulu Schenck, Lauretta and Edith Weber, Josephine Muffley, Blanche Swartz, and Ronald Welch came up from the Lock Haven normal to spend a few days vacation at their respective homes.

Rev. George F. Boggs and family, while enroute from Williamsport to Hollidaysburg, stopped off several days last week to greet his many friends. Rev. Boggs was formerly pastor of the Methodist church here. He was transferred to Hollidaysburg by the recent conference.

Easter ought to be a gala day in Howard in so far as Easter hats contribute to making it such. Miss Mittie Lucas last week returned from the east with her Easter millinery. Miss Alice Kline has opened a millinery department in her father's store and Miss Nettie Swartz this week received her supply of Spring hats. We now have three of the finest displays ever brought to town.

Last week and this week marked the closing of the public schools in the township. Next week the borough schools will finish their annual term. The High School is making preparations for the annual entertainment exercises, relative thereto, beginning next Sunday, when the baccalaureate sermon will be delivered in the Methodist church by Rev. E. F. Faust, pastor of the Reformed church. On Friday evening of next week the commencement exercises will be held in the same church. The class of 1911 numbers twelve, and is one of the largest ever graduated here. The commencement address will be made by Dr. S. E. Weber, whose ability is well known, and a rare treat is promised. Following are the members of the class, Nellie Confer, Elfrida Confer, Gertrude Herr, Helene Weber, Gertrude Thomas, Gladys A. Holter, Arvilla Gardner, Tessa Confer, Frank H. Robb, George R. Fletcher, Russell S. Wagner and Marion Fletcher. The small admission fee of ten cents will be charged to help defray expenses.

Pine Grove Mills.

Garner Harper is ill from pneumonia. Mrs. M. E. Heberling is on the sick list.

A. L. Bowersox and wife spent Sunday at the Keichline home.

Herb Rudy spent Sunday at his parental home, near Steffey's.

George Hall had hard luck last week, losing a horse and a cow.

G. B. McFry and wife visited friends at Fairbrook on Sunday.

James B. Goheen was a business visitor to Bellefonte on Monday.

G. Wash Ward, of Pittsburg, transacted business here this week.

G. W. Ward, of Pittsburg, spent Sunday at the parental home here.

D. L. Fye was here on Monday looking for 35-cent potatoes—and got them.

D. L. Fitzgerald, of Manor Hill, was here for seed oats and corn on Saturday.

Nannie Bailey has been ill from the grip the past month, but is now improving.

Mrs. Jennie Smeltzer has been quite ill the past month, but is now improving.

C. L. Fortney, of Altoona, was shaking hands with old friends here on Saturday.

J. H. Bailey and W. H. Glenn transacted business in Half-moon valley on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles From, of Altoona, spent Sunday with State College friends.

Ray Williams, wife and two youngsters visited Grandpa Williams over Sunday.

Last week James Mayes started for Minnesota to try his hand at farming and growing fancy stock.

Lester Harper, who has been ill from pneumonia for the last three weeks is somewhat better now.

Aaron Kepler is confined to his bed with pleurisy, the result of a drive to Bellefonte on Friday night.

Cliff Close, of Altoona, a fireman on the Pennsylv, has been visiting Centre County friends the past week.

Newton and John Dreibeis attended the meeting of the Centre Hall Fire Insurance Company on Monday.

Monday's flittings included Frank Fishburn going to State College and Fred Meyers to Pine Grove Mills.

W. P. Ard and J. E. Reish, students at Selinsgrove, are spending their vacation at their respective homes here.

Public sales and flittings have been all the go. Farmers are now turning their attention to preparing for the spring crops.

Dr. J. E. Ward, of Bellefonte, attended the Ward funeral on Saturday and remained over Sunday at his parental home.

C. B. Hess is replenishing his stock of store goods for his large spring trade. He had intended to quit and retire, but changed his mind.

Scotia.

Mrs. Harry Ellenberger, of Marengo, spent Friday with her mother and sisters.

Rev. Hugh Strain preached his first sermon on Sunday evening to a full house, making a very good impression.

Mr. and Mrs. John Fields, of Tyrone, were seen on the streets here one day last week. Mrs. Fields said they had just come to visit their son, Rudy, but John winked the other eye, as much as to say that new grandson was the attraction.

Harry Delige and a gang of woodsmen are busy taking out the timber for George Stevens' new barn, at Waddle. The trees must stand very plumb down there, for John Curry and Paul Tomko, two of his men' claim they saved a tree clean through and that it would not fall, even though it was a very windy day at that.

Scotia has a young man who builds his castles on a solid foundation, and not in the air. He recently told his minister that he had thirty $10 bills and eight sacks of flour. When he and his good wife started along life's lane together they made up their mind to get ready for a rainy day. Now Jimmie says it is raining and they are in the dry.

Farmer Thomas Huey was here on Monday. He reports a visitor to his home, on Buffalo Run, on Wednesday night of last week who was anything but welcome. While Thomas was sleeping the visitor carried off about thirty-five fine fat pullets. The next night visitor there is likely to carry away a load of buckshot, for hereafter Thomas will sleep with one eye open.

Scotia has lost another good man. On Wednesday William Harris moved onto one of lumberman George Thompson's farms, near Alto. One by one they are locating elsewhere. On Tuesday G. W. Williams took charge of a battery of boilers at Dunbar, in the position carrying a nice salary and steady work. James Hillard has been made truck foreman at the same place, and will move his family there in the near future.

One day last week Wilson Ghaner and son Floyd, were walking through the woods when they saw something shining in a brush pile. On going closer they were surprised to find it was a locomotive bell, with the bracket detached. They reported the matter to Superintendent Valentine, who immediately started an investigation. It was not long until he discovered that somebody had broken into the engine house and removed the bell from one of the locomotives. Why the thieves left it in the woods, after carrying it about two miles, is a mystery.

Unionville.

Mrs. William Border is quite ill from grip.

E. J. Williams, who has been laid up with a bad cold, is convalescing.

Mrs. Joseph Spotts, who was seriously ill from throat trouble last week, is somewhat improved.

We are sorry to note that Squire Pratt, who has been confined to his bed for several weeks, is not any better.

Miss Mary E. Griest has returned home after a very delightful visit with her brother, Edward, at Phillipsburg.

Mrs. Susan H. Blair is confined to her bed with diseases incident to advanced years. We hope she may soon be about again.

W. H. Baron, wife and sister-in-law, Miss Cambridge, have all been confined to their beds by illness. We trust they will soon be out again.

Philip Haines moved from Dix Run to Milesburg on Tuesday, last. We are sorry to lose such a whole-souled man like Mr. Haines, and hope he will like his new home.

Frank Lannon, of Bash Hollow, was thrown from a horse on Saturday and sustained a fractured arm and collar bone. He was removed to the Bellefonte hospital on the evening train.

Move! move! Don't talk about moving. Every direction you turned on Monday you could see somebody moving. Anybody coming to our town will inquire of the Chief of Police as to where their friends and relatives live.

Mrs. B. W. Shipley and daughter, Mrs. Charles Potter, were called to Altoona last week by the serious illness of Mrs. Shipley's son-in-law John Shadle, who is in the hospital at that place suffering from blood poisoning. At this writing he is improving.

The following officers of Lumen Lodge, No. 639, I. O. O. F. were installed on Saturday night by District Deputy Grand Master W. U. Irwin: N. G.—George W. Barton.

V. G.—H. M. Stere. Trustee—William Neiman. Treasurer—J. C. Smith. Secretary—Edward T. Hall.

Mt. Eagle.

John Thomas, the forgerman, was a Howard visitor on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Justice Leathers were visitors to Bellefonte on Saturday.

Misses Maude and Anna Dietz were shopping in Bellefonte on Saturday.

John Bathurst was in Howard on Saturday, attending to some shopping.

The Mt. Eagle school closed on Friday afternoon. All of the schools will close this week.

Mrs. Charles McMurtie, of Howard, was a Sunday visitor at the J. R. Pheasant home.

Rev. Mr. Baughman is holding a series of meetings in the Disciple church, at Mt. Eagle.

John C. Bower plans putting a slate roof on the farm house which is occupied by George Dietz.

Justice Leathers has moved into the Samuel Bowers house, in town, which he recently purchased.

A crew of men recently placed a telephone wire across the creek to the George Leathers house.

Miss Josephine Mason and sister, Margaret, of Bellefonte, spent several days with their mother on the farm.

Archie Bathurst, who lived in the Thad. Yearick house, on Saturday moved into the Van Gordon house, vacated by Samuel Yeager.

Harry Shultz, of Curtin, on Monday moved his family to Coatesville, where he is working in the steel mills. Hays Daughenbaugh moved into the Shultz house, Ward Daughenbaugh taking the house vacated by Hays. Mr. Albright moved onto the Johnston farm, recently vacated by Edward Confer.

The Old Town Clock.

At the sale held by County Commissioners Jacob Woodring, Harry Zimmerman and John Dunlap after remodeling and refurbishing the court house the old town clock was purchased by Charles Warfel and presented to the borough of Phillipsburg. Now there is a spirited contest in the enterprising town across the mountains, as to whether it should be placed on the public building or adorn the building of a Front Street merchant. There for a while it looked as though the N. G. P. would have to be called to Phillipsburg instead of Mexico. Many of the ladies identified with the Village Improvement Society are up in arms against placing the old historical clock on private property. None has been heard to swear but some of them have gone so far as to say "Great Scott! why don't they place it where it belongs?" If the women get worked up over the proposition we will be willing to gamble where the old time piece will go.

The Mysterious Lady

It Was a Question Whether She Was a Ghost or Flesh and Blood.

By F. A. MITCHEL

Copyright by American Press Association, N.Y.

Undoubtedly the most interesting city in the world—at any rate, to Europeans and Americans—is Rome. For twenty-five centuries she has been passing through exciting scenes such as have been but occasional with other cities. And her changes have been no less remarkable. There was the austere purity of the republic, the prodigality of the empire, her almost obliteration following the many attacks of her enemies, the petty quarrels and villainies of the middle ages.

Perhaps the most despicable period at Rome was during the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries. Within this period every head of a family inhabited his tower or stronghold, in which he defended himself against every other family. There were the Orsini, the Borgias, the Colonna and many other clans whose business it was to fight, slaughter or poison one another. Some of them grew rich through plunder—there was then no other way—and built enormous palaces, where they lived with their retainers in princely style.

During a visit to Rome I occupied a room in one of these palazzos. The building is very long and has been cut up into sections by partition walls. Not that there is any regularity in these partitions; they occur any and everywhere, and it is not easy to tell which ones were a part of the original palace and which have been built in since. I was curious about the pile, for though I was then but twenty-five years old I had read much about medieval Italy, and I knew the history of the house from its building. It was erected by one of the most villainous of the Roman family leaders that flourished in the fifteenth century. A number of times his enemies besieged his palace, overcame his followers, but could never capture him. The fox had means of escape that enabled him to go forth a free man, though every avenue of exit was carefully watched.

My room was on the second story on a corridor with apartments on either hand and was near one extremity. On the terminal wall was a mural picture.

Being interested, as I have said, in the building, I one day questioned the maid who took care of my room about its construction. The only information I elicited was that none of the rooms between me and the near end of the hall was occupied. This may have been because the summer season was coming on, when travelers seek more northerly climates.

Nevertheless one morning on leaving my room I was just in time to see a lady advance from this unoccupied region. Perhaps it was the work of my imagination, perhaps some arrangement of her costume borrowed from two or three centuries ago, but it seemed to me that the lady belonged to medieval times. There may be an other reason why I should have thus considered her, the fact that I had not expected her to come, so it seemed, out of the wall. For had not the maid told me that none of the rooms from whence she came was occupied?

However, I was so struck with the vision of loveliness that swept by me that "whence she came or what her name" occupied a comparatively small part of my thoughts concerning her. I watched her till she reached the center of the corridor and passed down the staircase. At that moment the maid came along, with her brooms and bucket, and I asked her about the rooms she had told me were vacant. She assured me that they were. Slipping a couple of lira into her hands, I asked her to unlock them. She opened every door, and there was nothing but the bare furniture in any one of them. Nor was there any opening or stairway leading elsewhere. In other words, the end of the corridor was a complete pocket.

From whence had the lady come? I regretted that I had not followed her downstairs to see whether she went. It was but 9 o'clock in the morning, and it occurred to me that she might have gone to the cafe on the first floor for breakfast. I went down there, but she was nowhere to be seen. She was in street costume and had doubtless gone out.

For several days I spent all my time going about the city, hoping to meet the mysterious lady, visiting every gallery, ruin or subterranean excavation in Rome. I did not happen to meet her. I kept an eye for her in the palazzo, both in the cafe and other parts of the building where I would be likely to meet her. My watchfulness availed me nothing. I experienced a strange sinking about the heart at thinking she might have left Rome.

Then one evening, ascending the staircase in the palazzo, I started down the corridor. No lights had yet been lit, and objects were very dim. As I was putting my key into the door of my room I felt a current of air and, turning, caught a glimpse of the mysterious lady going in the same direction as before.

I was then young, and superstitious that have a greater hold I think on youth than experienced age had not yet worn away. Somehow I was impressed with the belief that the mysterious lady was one of those who had inhabited the palazzo several centuries before. This feeling paralyzed me just long enough to permit her to escape me. Then, coming to my senses, I ran after her and down the staircase. I was too late. She had either passed on to the rooms at the other end of the corridor or had left the building. Probably she had entered some private apartment, for it was growing dark and too late for any lady, especially one young and beautiful, to be out on the street alone.

The next morning at an hour when the most light made its way into the corridor, having bribed the maid to lend me her pass key, I opened every door of those in the mysterious region and explored every room for some exit. I found none. Then I tapped the terminal wall, but got no sound indicating anything wooden or hollow. The mural painting was a landscape in which was a woman's figure in the dress of ancient Rome. The picture must have been very old, for the colors were much faded, and it had evidently been painted in the stiff style that had been in vogue when the palazzo was built. My examinations led me to no discovery whatever.

When it rains in Rome it rains hard. One afternoon when a torrent was pouring from the clouds and it was consequently very dark in the palazzo, going to my room, I saw a marvelous sight. It seemed that the wall beyond my room had been removed and the corridor had been indefinitely extended. There were a few dim lights about me, and the corridor in its whole length was lighted by similar ones. Owing to the dimness all this was barely perceptible. Then the extension melted away, and there was only the ill defined space at the end of the corridor to which I had been used.

Thinking there must be something the matter with my eyes, I put a fist against each of them and gave them a prolonged rubbing. When I took my fists away for another look there was the mysterious lady coming toward me.

She smiled as she passed me. Possibly my sensibilities were much overwrought and my imagination exaggerated everything, but it seemed to me that smile was the sweetest I had ever seen—a woman's face.

Again my superstitious instincts caused me to stand stock still while I might have determined whether the vision were ghost or flesh and blood by means of touch. But it seemed to me that I had been swung back to medieval times and this woman was moving within the palazzo as she had moved there several centuries before. When she had passed beyond me, instead of following her I crammed my fists again against my eyes to restore a normal sight. When I removed them the vision had disappeared.

That was the last view I had of the mysterious lady at the palazzo. In vain I waited for her to appear again, vowing that if she did I would seize her and detain her till I could determine whether she were flesh and blood. But after several weeks' patient waiting, since she did not appear and I met her nowhere in Rome, I was forced to conclude that if she were a ghost she had been exorcized and if she were flesh and blood she had left the Eternal City. I made no effort to get an explanation, for in the first place I didn't care to let any one know how superstitious or perhaps stupid I had been, and the secret was one that I preferred to keep down at the bottom of my heart. I left Rome still uncertain whether I had been bewitched by a medieval ghost or my charmer were a real person.

Fate brought me a solution. Returning to America, a few days out from Southampton one morning on deck I passed the mysterious lady sitting in a steamer chair.

I looked at her in amazement. She burst into a laugh.

"You and I don't need an introduction," she said. "We have met before. Be seated," pointing to a vacant chair beside her, "and I will tell you all about it."

I accepted the invitation, and she continued: "I occupied rooms in the compartment next to yours in the palazzo. One who knew every nook and corner, every secret passage, in the building showed me a wall dividing a corridor filled by a mirror. Touching a spring, the wall swung on a pivot, and when reversed a mural painting was where the mirror had been.

"It occurred to me that I would like to astonish some one by passing through this passageway. To heighten the effect I wore a dress which is a modernized costume of the sixteenth century. The first person I hit upon was you, and I enjoyed your look of wonder immensely. The last time I appeared to you when I was passing the wall I saw you near the staircase. Crouching, I turned the mirror toward you, thus giving you a reflection of the corridor in which you stood. This, I knew, would cause the hall to appear to you continuous. Then when you covered your eyes I swung back the reverse."

"What a fool I was!" I exclaimed. "I have been in doubt whether you were an apparition of a medieval dame or flesh and blood."

"Have you?" she exclaimed, with delight. "Had I known that how much more pleasure I should have derived from the freak."

"I presume," I said musingly, "that the passage through the wall was built and used by the fox who first owned and occupied the palazzo?"

"Yes, I was told that on one occasion it saved his life."

"He must have had skillful workmen to make it. I examined it carefully, even knocking on it, but could find nothing more than a blank wall."

The next summer the mysterious lady and I made a wedding trip to Rome, stopped at the palazzo, and I made a very critical search for the spring that opened it. My wife was obliged to show me where it was.

Generous and Independent.

In front of a confectioner's shop in Paris there used to sit a woman with two wooden legs. She sold pictures and songs and played well on the violin. In 1848 she was there, very pretty and dressed with a good deal of taste, and when Louis Napoleon, then merely Prince Louis, used to go through the street nearly every day, he never passed without giving her something. She knew him and was also aware of his pecuniary embarrassments and his political ambitions. One evening she said to him, "Monsieur, I want to say a word to you."

"Say it, madame."

"They tell me that you are a good deal cramped just now. I have at my house a comfortable sun which is curling nothing. Let me offer it to you. You will return the favor when you are emperor."

Prince Louis did not accept the money, but he did not forget the kindness, and when he became emperor he offered her a small annuity. The woman was as independent as she was generous. "Say to the emperor," she replied, "that it is exceedingly good of him to remember me, but I cannot accept his offer. If he had accepted mine I won't say what might have happened, but as it is, no."

A Daring Horseman.

The famous John Mytton once galloped full speed over a rabbit warren to try whether or not his horse would fall. The horse did fall and rolled over Mytton, who, with good luck, got up unhurt. Shortly after he attained his majority Mytton gave a dealer an order for some carriage horses and went to see what the man had got for him. He put one of the lot in as tandem leader to "try" it and with the dealer at his side drove out on the highroad. As they drove Mytton inquired if the horse were a good timber jumper, and the dealer giving a doubtful answer to a query he did not expect in respect of a harness horse, Mytton instantly said he must "try" him. Forthwith he drove at the turnpike gate which barred the way before him. The horse cleverly cleared it, leaving the wheeler, the gig and its occupants on the take-off side. Wonderful to relate, neither the horse nor the man was hurt. The gig, however, stood in urgent need of repairs.—London Stock Journal.

Too Rich For His Pocket.

After the war with Spain a party of Americans, including Colonel Hecker of Detroit, went to Cuba on a tour of inspection. They had with them a negro messenger named Frank. One day Frank got into a place where they sell ice and cakes on the Prado, in Havana, and bought a plate of ice cream. That was 20 cents. The waiter handed around some cakes. Frank took a few. The cakes were passed for a second and a third time. On each occasion Frank helped himself liberally. Then he called for his check. It was $1.80, American. Colonel Hecker and some friends, who were at an adjoining table, heard Frank yell.

"What is the matter, Frank?" asked the colonel.

"Why didn't you stop me?" sobbed Frank. "Why didn't you stop me? Doan you know dis yer nigger could eat enough of dis yer stuff to bankrupt the bull government?"—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

A Curious Remedy.

Perhaps the most curious remedy for seasickness ever prescribed was that arranged by Sir Theodore Meyers for the English princess royal when she crossed to Belgium in 1642. Cinnamon, coriander, anise, ambergris, musk and sugar were to be made up into long tubes for her to munch on the voyage; a plaster of balsam of Peru, gum mastich and laudanum was to be applied to the pit of the stomach, and in addition she was to inhale the comforting vapors arising from a hash of toast, orange and citron peel, roses, lavender and cloves mingled with wine, cinnamon water and elder flower vinegar.

The Reproof.

It was in the midst of the football season, and the students of Professor Blank's class, well aware that their lesson had been neglected, were prepared for reproof, but not for just the way in which it came.

At the end of the hour he slammed down his book on the desk and exclaimed: "Well, that's the worst recitation I ever listened to! Why, I've actually done nine-tenths of it myself!"—Youth's Companion.

Unanswered.

To "Anxious Inquirer," who asks us if there are rats on a catboat and whether coveateers were first put on milk trains, we reply that the editor who knows all about such things is busy looking up whether or not Richard III., when he stopped King Henry's bier, thus became the first temperance crusader, and will not be able to answer Anxious Inquirer until he rests up a little.—Browning's Magazine.

Enlightened.

"Before I married," said Mr. Henpeck, "I didn't know what it meant to support a wife."

"I presume you know now."

"Yes, indeed. I looked up the word 'support' in the dictionary and discovered that one of its meanings is 'endure.'"

Smoking That Maddens.

Marihuana is a weed used by people of the lower class and sometimes by soldiers, but those who make larger use of it are prisoners sentenced to long terms. The use of the weed and its sale, especially in barracks and prisons, are very severely punished; yet it has many adepts, and Indian women cultivate it because they sell it at rather high prices. The dry-leaves of marihuana alone or mixed with tobacco make the smoker wilder than a wild beast. It is said that immediately after the first three or four drafts of smoke smokers begin to feel a slight headache; then they see everything moving, and finally they lose all control of their mental faculties. Everything, the smokers say, takes the shape of a monster, and men look like devils. They begin to fight, and, of course, everything smashed is a monster "killed." But there are imaginary beings whom the wild man cannot kill, and these inspire fear until the man is panic stricken and runs.—Mexican Herald.

The Curse of Cowdray.

Cowdray, once the estate of the earls of Egmont and now in the possession of Lord Cowdray, better known as Sir Weetman Pearson, is the subject of a very interesting superstition. Shortly after the dissolution of the monasteries Cowdray was conferred upon Sir Anthony Browne, the father of the first Lord Montague, who had already been given Battle Abbey as a reward for his services to Henry VIII. The story goes that Sir Anthony, who had destroyed the church and the cloisters in Battle Abbey, was visited in the great hall as he was holding his first feast by one of the disposed monks, who after solemnly cursing him, prophesied that his family should perish by fire and water. Two centuries and a half later the prophecy was tragically fulfilled. In 1793 the house was destroyed by fire and within a week of that disaster the last Lord Montague lost his life in Germany in an unsuccessful attempt to shoot the falls of the Rhine.—London News.

Belts by the Pound.

A western senator of ample physical proportions was endeavoring to obtain a belt at a Washington haberdashery. He was having a difficult time in selecting a belt whose design struck his fancy as well as of proper requirements for his girth.

"How much is that one?" he demanded of the clerk, who was entirely unaware of the distinguished character of the patron.

"That is $4," said the salesman. "Four dollars!" exclaimed the senator. "Isn't that an awful price for a belt?"

"Yes, sir," admitted the man behind the counter; "but, you see, sir, after they get into the regular surcingle size we charge for 'em by the pound."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Very Brief.

A record of brevity in a holiday correspondence was established by a Frenchman in the eighteenth century. Voltaire and Piton, the epigrammatist, exchanged challenges to write the shortest possible letter. So, when Voltaire was starting on a journey, he wrote to Piton, "Eo rus," which is the complete Latin for "I am going to the country." Piton's answer was just "I"—complete Latin for "Go."

In business correspondence the record is divided between Victor Hugo, who, anxious to know how his "Les Misérables" was going, wrote to the publisher, "T" and the publisher, who triumphantly replied, "T."

A Servile House of Lords.

When King Henry VIII's name was spoken in his presence in the house of lords every peer prostrated himself with Asiatic servility. An entry in the records of the house gives the substance of a speech delivered by the chancellor on Jan. 16, 1541, in which the king's goodness and wisdom are extolled, and it tells us that whenever his majesty was mentioned, "which happened often," all the lords prostrated themselves, bowing to the ground as one man.

The Important Personage.

"Are you the owner of this place?" asked the book agent.

"I am," replied Farmer Cornstassel.

"Anything I can do for you?"

"No. The chances are that you are too hard worked to have time to read anything and that you haven't any spare change anyhow. Let me talk to the hired man."—Washington Star.

Poor Simile.

"I never saw any one so timid as Henpeck is," remarked Wigger. "Why, he's like a mouse in his own house."

"Nonsense!" exclaimed Wigger. "His wife isn't the least bit afraid of him."

Patience.

Her Mother—You must be patient with him. The Bride—Oh, I am. I know it will take time for him to see that he can't have his own way.

Persons calling for these letters will kindly explain that the same have been advertised in "The Republican."

Leaving Phillipsburg.
Dr. W. P. McIntosh, who has lately been associated with Dr. W. B. Henderson in the practice of medicine, purposes leaving Phillipsburg about April 10th, expecting to return to Baltimore to accept a lucrative position as an acting assistant surgeon in the United States Public Health and Marine Hospital, and where his father, Dr. W. P. McIntosh, Sr., has for years been chief surgeon.

Now is the Time.
Now is the time for the road supervisors of Centre County to get their road drags in shape for use as soon as the frost is entirely out of the ground.

On Wednesday evening, April 19, an interesting address on missions will be delivered by Mrs. E. L. MacGeary, of Bradford, in the Free Methodist church at the Nittany campus. A hearty welcome is extended to everybody.

Camels That Ride.
The Bedouins decorate their baggage camels in the most fantastic manner. A huge pack saddle is surmounted by a still larger pannier. Above this again is a sort of chair in which the rider sits. The long strips of leather hanging down the sides are simply for decorative purposes. I have seen camels when too young to go on long treks being carried in these panniers, and they are always used for the Bedouin children.

This tribe has many quaint and curious customs. Perhaps the most curious of these is the manner in which they show their esteem for certain strangers. One evening when a young camel had been killed for the meal I noticed the women collecting the blood in a bowl. Then, to my astonishment, they started painting my camels on the necks and flanks with the blood. Unknowingly I was the recipient of the greatest honor that can be paid a stranger. The blood dried on and remained for a long time, acting as a talisman among all the Sherarat tribe—Douglas Carruthers in Wide World Magazine.

A Tragedy of Instinct.
The processionaries are rather strange caterpillars. A single string of them five or six yards long has just climbed down from my parasol plies and is at this moment unfolding itself in the walls of my garden, carpeting the ground traversed with transparent silk, according to the custom of the race. To say nothing of the meteorological apparatus of unparalleled delicacy which they carry on their spine, these caterpillars, as everybody knows, have this remarkable quality—that they travel only in a troop, one after the other, like the blind of Brehulgh or those in the parable, each of them obstinately, indissolubly following their leader; so much so that our author having one morning disposed the file on the edge of a large stone vase, thus closing the circuit, for seven whole days, during an atrocious week, through cold, hunger and unspeakable weariness, the unhappy troop on its tragic round without rest, respite or mercy, pursued the pitiless circle until death arrived—Forum.

Called For Glory Divine.
Among the customers in a drug store one day last week was a little girl who is known to her playmates in that vicinity as "Peggy." As she stood waiting for her turn it could be noticed that her mother had sent her to buy.

"Mother wants five cents' worth of glory divine,"

"Of what?" said the young clerk, who was standing there as if stunned by a hard blow of a baseball bat.

"Glory divine, glory divine," came the reply in a louder voice than when she had made the original request.

"You had better go home and have your mother write it down on paper, little girl," said the clerk, feeling that the girl was too sure to argue with him.

Soon she returned, and, handing the note to the clerk, he read, "Five cents' worth of chlorate of lime."—Philadelphia Times.

A Bit of Sicily.
"There is no Italian town more picturesque than the Sicilian capital, Palermo," writes a traveler. "In its port lie crowded the queerest coasting craft I have ever set eyes on. Sailing ships of all rigs, their hulls painted all the colors of the rainbow, nose up against the quay, where mule carts, whose drivers are shouting at the top of their voices, wait to take away the merchandise. The narrow street where the custom house officers examine the goods brought ashore is a place of terrific noise. When a driver, two clerks and two custom house officers are discussing the contents of a bale or a cask it seems as though murder must be committed within the next few seconds. But somebody signs something, the cart moves on, and everybody laughs."

Murdering Shakespeare.
"I never hesitate to cut and slash and change any play until it suits me," said Stuart Robson to his legal adviser on one occasion.

"I suppose you edit Shakespeare with a blue pencil?" replied the lawyer.

"You can just bet I do."

"Then, I imagine, you would plead guilty to an indictment for murdering the Bard of Avon?"

"No; I would not, but I would admit dissecting his corpse."

Needs Prodding.
"It is a great mistake, Mabel, to trifle with the affections of a man who loves you by encouraging some one else."

"Well, he's a little slow, auntie. I think he needs a pacemaker."

Kindness.
Life is short, and we have never too much time for gladdening the hearts of those who are traveling the same dark journey with us. Oh, be swift to love; make haste to be kind!—Amiel.

Specialization.
Doctor—What can I do for you? Patient—I have cut my index finger. Doctor—Very sorry, but I am a specialist on the middle finger.—Fillegende Blatter.

Auricular Evidence.
"My daughter, Gladys Mae, has become quite an eloquentist."

"Yes," peevishly replied the next door neighbor, "so I hear."—Puck.

For the purpose of correcting any errors of appraisement, an appeal will be held at County Treasurer's office, Bellefonte, Pa., on Saturday, April 22nd, 1911, between the hours of 10 A. M. and 3 P. M., and those who so desire can attend.
S. S. MILES,
Mercantile Appraiser.

MEN WANTED
Wages $25 to $50 a Week in Automobile Work—Thousands of Jobs Waiting Competent Men in all Parts of the Country.
In addition to the immense number now in operation about 30,000 Automobiles will be manufactured this year and this means work for thousands of men qualified to Sell, Repair, Drive and Demonstrate Automobiles and Trucks. The Rochester Automobile Pool will fit any man in a few weeks to fill any of these positions without interfering with his present employment, get him a job and give him an opportunity to make $10 weekly while learning. For information write ROCHESTER AUTOMOBILE SCHOOL, 1531 Church St. Rochester, N. Y.

Concrete Sidewalks
Greatly add to the appearance and enhance the value of a property.
Our practical experience enables us to give you first-class work in this line.

Rhoads & Knisely,
CONTRACTORS IN

Here and There.

Budd Thompson, of Martha, was a visitor in town between trains on Monday.

J. Frank McFarlane, of Boalsburg, made a business trip to Bellefonte on Monday.

Hon. William Kepler, of Pine Grove Mills was a visitor in Bellefonte on Monday.

Hon. William M. Allison, of Spring Mills, was a business visitor to Bellefonte on Tuesday.

John Blanchard, Esq., of Bellefonte, has moved into his new residence on West Linn Street.

Sheriff and Mrs. W. E. Hurley attended the funeral of the former's father, at Roaring Springs, on Monday.

Harry E. Jenkins, who is identified with the Howard National Bank, was an over-Sunday visitor in Bellefonte.

"Sam" Miller, the mixologist at the Bush House, became the father of a beautiful little daughter on Friday.

The family of John Guisewite, of Bellefonte, have moved to Cherry Tree, Pa., where they will make their future home.

George H. Yarnell, of Zion, one of the aspirants for the Republican nomination for Sheriff, greeted friends in town on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Richards, who had been spending several months at Atlantic City, returned to Bellefonte on Friday.

Miss Helen McGowan, of Snow Shoe, who had been visiting friends at Clearfield for two weeks, returned home on Thursday.

Frederick, son of Col. and Mrs. W. Fred Reynolds, left on Monday for Newport where he resumed his studies at a large school.

John Jackson, of Lemont, came to Bellefonte on Wednesday and sold a number of dressed chickens to Lewis Gitting, the butcher.

Prof. H. C. Rothrock, of Boalsburg, who is seeking the Republican nomination for Prothonotary, was a visitor to Bellefonte on Monday.

Fred Dunham, editor of the Howard Hustler was circulating among his friends in Bellefonte on Saturday. He says that everything is going his way.

Mrs. Harry Haag, of Bellefonte, who had been visiting her daughter at Johnstown, returned home on Tuesday afternoon. She was very much pleased with her little vacation.

W. T. Speer, adjuter for Joseph Horne & Co., of Pittsburg, arrived in Bellefonte Friday afternoon and remained until Saturday afternoon. Pressure of business prevented him from remaining longer.

Prof. George P. Bible, of Philadelphia, arrived in Bellefonte on Tuesday afternoon and became the guest of his daughter, Mrs. Russel Blair, on Spring Street. He also visited Miss Mary Bradley and her mother.

The Philipsburg Ledger says that George M. Rhule has rented the Atherton property, on Ninth street, and is taking possession of it. This is one of the prettiest locations in town, and the quaint old house is a very desirable home.

Jra C. Antis, one of our valued subscribers, was a genial caller at "The Republican" office on Monday. Mr. Antis has been located at Linden for some time past but in the future will receive his copy of the paper at Warriors Mark.

Undertaker S. S. Osman, son of Post master H. H. Osman, of Port Matilda, was in Bellefonte on Monday. He took charge of the remains of Mrs. Albon Baney who died in the hospital on Sabbath afternoon. He is a very pleasant and courteous gentleman.

On Tuesday morning William Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Smith, and Mrs. Clair Kessinger, both of Bellefonte, went to the Methodist parsonage where they were married by Rev. Ezra Yocum. They left on the afternoon train for Buffalo, N. Y., on a wedding trip.

Miss Margaret Cook, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Cook, who spent her vacation in Bellefonte, left Saturday for Wellesley College where she is one of the instructors. About the middle of June she, accompanied by her parents, will cross the ocean and make a tour of Europe.

Next Monday Mrs. Minnie Hughes and family will leave Bellefonte for the beautiful State of California where they expect to make their future home. They are a very pleasant family and will be missed here. Miss Daisy Graham of Brooklyn, N. Y., will take her place as matron at the Academy.

The other day we were asked whether the crack of the ball against the bat will be heard in Bellefonte this summer. Well that depends. In order to have a good winning baseball team the coming season in Bellefonte the first thing necessary is for the people who have the sporting blood to get behind the movement and push.

Mrs. Frank Campbell, formerly of Bellefonte, but who had been employed as a waitress for the nurses in the Ear and Eye hospital, Pittsburg, arrived in Bellefonte on Monday evening and spent the night with friends. On Tuesday afternoon she went to Boalsburg, where she will spend a month or more with her aged mother, Mrs. Hannah Woomer.

On Saturday evening Col. and Mrs. W. Fred Reynolds, of Bellefonte, entertained at dinner in honor of Dr. and Mrs. Grenfel, who have given a lecture in the Presbyterian church the same evening. The other guests present were General James A. Beaver and wife, Rev. and Mrs. John Hewitt, of Bellefonte, and Dr. E. E. Sparks and wife, of State College. Dr. Grenfel is an interesting conversationalist, and all at this beautiful feast were delightfully entertained.

Several weeks ago Roland Miller, who resides on the Eckley farm, above Coleville, purchased a team of horses and before he had them home sold them to A. G. Morris for the Huntingdon Reformatory. Recently Roland purchased from T. H. Stevens, of near Jacksonsville, a team that is four and five years old, and it is said its banner team of Centre County. They are well mated and when placed on the scales they tilted the beam at 3300 hundred, each weighing 1650 pounds. To buy them you will have to clip a good many coupons.

The end of winter is not yet. Spring is just fifteen days over due.

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Crider are expected to arrive home today from Florida.

Joseph L. Montgomery, manager of the Pennsylvania Match Company, left on Wednesday for New York City.

Squire John Miller and Harry McCracken, of Ferguson township, were among the visitors in Bellefonte on Wednesday.

J. Finkelstein is now located in his new room on South Allegheny street. When he gets fixed up he will have John Vanamaker beaten to a frazzle.

William Mayes, the progressive marble dealer, of Howard, greeted his many friends in Bellefonte on Wednesday. He is one of the busiest men in Centre County.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Daisy Potter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Potter, of Bellefonte, and H. Laird Curtin, of Curtin. The wedding will be in June.

The Tyrone Herald says that Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Garman, of that place, have been spending several days in Philadelphia. Probably they have been selecting furniture for their remodeled hotel.

On account of having her eyes treated Miss Minnie Cole, one of the composers in this office, has been off duty for the last ten days. We are glad to state that the little vacation has been of great benefit to her.

Our good friend B. W. Shipley, of Unionville, was a welcome caller at "The Republican" office some days ago and while here he advanced his subscription another year. Few men who are 79 years old carry their age so easily as does Mr. Shipley. He is, indeed, 79 years young.

On Friday evening the local order of Red Men will feast and banquet in their handsome rooms on the third floor of the Centre County Bank building. This is one of the times the attendance should be large, as this will be a feast good enough to set before lords. The Red Men never do anything on the halves.

Charles Meginney-Hood, managing editor, of the State College Times, accompanied by his wife, passed through Bellefonte Saturday on their way to the College from Altoona, where they had been visiting friends. Mr. Meginney-Hood says that business with them is booming. Commencement is not far off which makes business brisk in their printing office.

Mr. and Mrs. N. B. Spangler, of Bellefonte, left this morning accompanied by Mrs. Thomas Fisher, of Unionville, for Port Allegany, Pa., to attend the wedding of Harold Fisher, of Unionville, and Miss Martha Zahnizer, of Port Allegany. The wedding will take place this evening at the home of the bride. The young groom passed through Bellefonte Wednesday evening on his way to Port Allegany. They will make their future home at the Fisher homestead at Unionville.

Donald L. Sommerville, son Mr. and Mrs. James L. Sommerville, of Winburn, Clearfield county, who resided in Bellefonte for a number of years, has been made the Assistant Superintendent of the Pennsylvania division on the New York Central Railroad, with headquarters at Jersey Shore. He is a cousin of James H. Potter and has other relatives here. He takes the place of I. W. Evans who had been in Jersey Shore but who has transferred to Oswego, N. Y. Mr. Sommerville was formerly stationed at Buffalo, N. Y. He is a young man who has made good by properly applying himself.

The Bellefonte Academy base ball team made a great record on Monday by playing the State College varsity and holding them down to a score of 3 to 1 in a seven-inning game. Symes, of the Academy, pitched a very pretty game which simply carried away an audience of 1500 people. It is certainly a good beginning and if the boys keep the good work up by the end of season those large columns in front of the Academy will be covered with scalps. On Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock the Academy will play a strong team from the College on Hughes' field. You can do nothing better than to go out and give the home team proper encouragement.

Tuesday evening a resident of Bellefonte mistook George Knisely's Pool room for the hospital, but he found that he had made no serious mistake as Dr. "Reddy" Lane had an instrument on the show case that is always ready to be brought into action for a quick amputation. Standing in front of the counter the person is question accidentally placed his right four finger in the cutter that clips the end of cigars. In a second blood began to flow like water. Upon a careful examination it was found that about an eight of an inch had been sliced off the top of the finger: Dr. "Ed." Robb, of the First National Bank, rendered valuable assistance in getting the flow of blood stopped. He consulted several times with Charles L. Gates, the eminent surgeon. The unfortunate individual not wishing to place his life entirely in the hands of the above medical experts went across the way to Olewine's hardware store where he had his case diagnosed by Drs. Harvey and Charles Shaffer who administered the turpentine cure for all ills and pains. The next morning the patient could sit up and take nourishment. Moral—if you don't know what to do with your fingers keep 'em in your pocket or sit on them.

Sunday Postoffice Service.

The Bellefonte postoffice will be closed on and after Sunday next, April 9th. The boxes will be served as usual, but no stamps will be sold, and the general delivery window will be open for fifteen minutes—from 12 m. to 12:15—for the accommodation of the traveling public and for persons who expect special mail, for which requisition must be made at the window on the day before and on which special delivery rates (10 cents) will be charged.

All special delivery letters will be delivered as usual and the lobby will be open from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. for the accommodation of persons holding boxes which can be rented for Sunday service at regular quarterly rates.

All mail deposited up to 4 p. m. will be despatched on the 4.44 train as usual.

STATE COLLEGE CONCERT

Great Crowd Grooms Performers for A. H. S. Seniors' Benefit.

The Altoona Tribune says that the Pennsylvania State College Concert orchestra Friday evening entertained a large crowd in the Altoona High school auditorium for the benefit of the seniors of the school, who had chosen this method of raising funds for the expenses incidental to their commencement festivities rather than having a class play. The entire concert was thoroughly enjoyed by the large audience present.

The orchestra gave three excellent selections and then Mr. Eber O. Arthur gave a fine cello solo, "Nocturne." Five more selections by the orchestra completed the first part, which was closed with a rousing yell for State.

Dr. Sparks, president of the college, gave a five-minutes rapid-fire talk containing flows of humor, and at the close was greeted with much applause.

The orchestra rendered three selections and Mr. Harry P. Armstrong sang a baritone solo, "The Two Grenadiers." His rich sounding voice was one of the rarest treats of an evening full of pleasure. Two selections by the orchestra closed the concert.

Encores were frequent at different times in the evening and the great applause showed how much the audience enjoyed the concert. The conductor of the orchestra was P. M. Snively. E. F. Davis is the manager, H. P. Okleen the assistant manager, and W. S. Dye, Jr., the treasurer. Among the players was John E. Heeter, a graduate of the Altoona high school in the class of 1908 and leader of the high school orchestra for two years. The instrumentation was as follows: First violins, E. F. Davis, John E. Heeter, H. P. Okleen, J. H. Westermann, and J. B. Itell; second violins, D. P. Robinson, G. W. Crawford, E. F. Gwindhoeffer and R. E. Hensner; violas, A. G. Moul and P. W. Robinson; cello, E. O. Arthur; basses, W. E. Haskins and H. E. Corl; clarinets, G. L. Summer and J. E. White; flutes, A. P. Kitchell and A. E. Miller; oboe, J. C. Smith; bassoon, A. F. Hildebrandt; tuba, S. D. Humes; horns, R. D. Clapp and R. R. Wood; cornets, W. A. Moyer and C. M. Jones; trombones, C. S. Vanried and A. D. Clapp; drums, S. Redsecker.

After the concert, the seniors gave a reception to the visitors in the domestic science rooms of the school, serving delicious refreshments. Several hours of social enjoyment were later spent in the Wolf building.

"Jake" Made Them Put Up.

Jacob Barlett, the Bellefonte drayman, is riding around the town this week with a little extra spending money in his inside pocket. On Monday night the show entitled "My Cinderella Girl" was the attraction at Garman's opera house. After it was over "Jake" began hauling the scenery and trunks to a car standing on the railroad siding near P. F. Keich line's store. The agreement, with the manager of the show was that the scenery should be hauled for so much a load and for the trunks the drayman charged so much a piece. After arriving at the car with a load of scenery "Jake" discovered that three trunks had been placed on the wagon. The drayman said he was willing to haul two of them for nothing but demanded pay for the third. This was refused, then "Jake" came to the conclusion that no more scenery should be placed in the car until the showmen would settle. While they were discussing the question and exchanging compliments, a fellow came out of the car and struck "Jake" a blow that knocked him off the wagon. Policeman Harry Dukeman, who was "Johnny on the Spot," jumped on the wagon and took hold of "Jake's" assailant, while he knocked the other fellow down. When the strangers saw they might have a fine and a big bill of costs to pay, they concluded to go down into their "jeans" and make an amicable settlement. Jacob, therefore, secured his money for the hauling of the scenery and trunks and a little dough besides, enough to teach the other fellows that when they come to Bellefonte and begin their monkey business they must either shut up or put up.

Big Lumber Deal.

According to the Centre Hall Reporter Messrs. J. M. Gilliland and John W. and Elmer Tressler, of New Bloomfield; W. O. Rearick, of Milroy; L. G. Rearick, of Centre Hall, and William Harter, of Coburn, recently closed one of the largest deals in timberland that has been consummated for some time. They purchased 2,515 acres of timberland in Powell and Menifee counties, Kentucky, paying therefor the sum of $175,000. It is estimated that there are 35,000,000 feet of lumber on the tract, mostly poplar, oak and hemlock. The land lies in the great basin, surrounded by a rocky rim of cliffs and in order to get the lumber out a tunnel, seven hundred feet long, is being cut through for a railroad. The price paid for the timberland includes the completion of this tunnel, and the erection and equipment of a huge sawmill and electric plant.

The parties interested have been on the tract of timber and also inspected the incomplete sawmill and other improvements, and are satisfied the investment to be an exceptionally good one.

LIFE INSURANCE

is Practical Prudence;

It is money put out at interest; it is an investment for wife and children; it is a border of sunlight along the edge of the cloud of bereavement; it is the flower of love surviving the frost of death; it is a man's freedom of will in tune with God's sovereignty. All this and more—but remember that good intentions never yet accomplished results—it takes action.
